Flooding, Soil Erosion In The Distant Past At Troutman Farm

WOMELSDORF (Berks Co.) — Soil maps don't always tell you everything you need to know about a farm and what can be done on it to save soil.

Nothing in the books faithfully describes one Berks conservation farm.

Nowhere does it say that the Retland Farm, owned by Franklin Troutman, sometimes has to endure a troublesome northwest wind that can chill in the spring, throw dirt around in the fall, and can sometimes move the soil all by itself.

And nothing can describe the frustration the Troutmans felt one day in June 1993 when five inches of rain fell in one day, creating havoc with terraces and sabotaging newly constructed waterways.

The rainwater "beat up the waterways, flooded them and came over the banks, and washed out the waterway that year," said Franklin.

Two years ago, the Troutmans decided to "write their own book," in a manner of speaking, on managing soil on the farm, constructing long storage terraces on the back side and running underground pipes to carry the water away.

Since then, huge rainfall hasn't been something to make them lose

Is There A Packing House In Future For Regional Growers?

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — Vegetable growers may someday have an alternative way to market their vegetables.

For many growers, local auctions have been the way to sell produce. For large-scale growers, or for times when the auctions are literally flooded with product in the heart of the season, packing houses — such as the ones to market Jersey Fresh tomatoes — could be an alternative that could also be a blessing for regional auctions.

Proposals for the packing house and information about what pack-

Issue Highlights New Methods, Laneways

This issue of Lancaster Farming includes Foraging Around, a special quarterly section dedicated to the forage grower and grazier, with information supplied by the Pennsylvania Forage and Grassland Council (PFGC). Included is a feature on the Kress Simpson farm, attempting to adopt innovative methods of farming, especially grazing. Also included are news about how to construct laneways, the new PFGC president's message, and information from the recent state PFGC conference.

Pa. Milk Marketing Board Sets First-Ever Floating Premium

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — The Pennsylvania Milk Marketing Board (PMMB) on Thursday set its first-ever floating over-order Class I premium.

The PMMB is an agency of the state that has oversight of the dairy industry with the mission to ensure that consumers and farmers are protected for fairness in their dealings with milk.

The PMMB audits and licenses dairy businesses and holds bonds of forfeiture to cover farmer losses, should a business that received milk declare bankrupcty, for example.

It also has the authority to set minimum retail, wholesale and processor prices, and set a mandatory bonus called an "over-order premium" to be paid to Pennsylvania farmers whose milk gets processed in Pennsylvania, and then is

USDA-MO Dept Ag Market News

DAILY NATIONAL GRAIN SUMMARY

Grain and soybean bids turned moderately to sharply higher, today, as weather seems to be the biggest factor, especially for wheat and corn. Wheat 2 to 4 cents higher. Corn 2 to 4 cents higher. Sorghum 3 cents higher. Soybeans 2 to 7 cents higher. Wheat bids climbed higher as traders fear the frost expected in hard red winter wheat areas over the next few days could cause damage . Parts of western Kansas are forecast to drop below 20 degrees in the country. This is where 20 to 25 percent of the winter wheat crop is reported as jointing or beyond. Good overnight export sales also boosted bids. Sharp gains were seen in corn and bean bids due to cold conditions and rain are forecast for the Western Cornbelt area. Early planting of corn has slowed this week, already due to wet weather. South Korea's corn purchase was supportive. Soybean bids followed corn and wheat higher but stronger oil and meal demand also added support. Soyoil is up sharply on higher world veg oil prices. USDA reported soy oil stocks/use ratio the lowest in four years.

The OLD FARMER'S ALMANAC THIS WEEK WITH

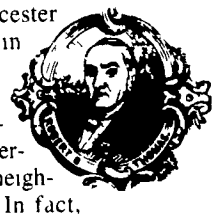
ST. GEORGE, APRIL 23.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY ROBERT B!

Born in Grafton, Massachusetts, on April 24, 1766, Robert Bailey Thomas was the first of 12 editors and 23 publishers to concern themselves with The Old Farmer's Almanac, now in its 207th edition Few readers know of Thomas's close call with smallpox, which nearly took his life in 1792, before his first Almanac of 1793 He was inoculated in Worcester after an outbreak of the disease in Boston From that shot, he wrote, "I had the disease very severely For many days my life was dispaired of, and, in fact, it was, I afterward learned, reported in the neighboring towns that I was dead " In fact, typhus took him in 1846



The reports of my death are greatly exaggerated.

– Mark Twain

TIP OF THE WEEK

ARUGULA & BACON PASTA

8 pieces bacon, fried crisp
2 cloves garlic, minced
1 bunch arugula, chopped (about 2 cups)
1 cup heavy cream
12 ounces fettucine
grated Parmesan

Chop the fried bacon into bits and set aside Sauté the garlic in a tablespoon or two of the bacon fat (or use olive oil) Chop the arugula into 1-inch pieces, then add to the garlic and sauté until just wilted (about 2 minutes) Add the cream and stir to heat, then stir in the bacon Meanwhile, in a large pot of boiling water, cook the pasta until just tender Spoon the sauce over the fettucine and serve hot, with grated cheese Makes 4 servings.

The OLD FARMER'S WEATHER PROVERBS

At St. Gorgen (St. George, Apr. 24), the meadow turns into hay.

A cold and moist April fills the cellar and fattens the cow.

April and May are the keys of the year.

OPINION

In Defense Of Livestock Farming

Unfortunately, very few facts are being used in the debate over confinement livestock operations and the environment. But Dave Juday gave 10 supporting facts in the form of questions at the recent American Legislative Exchange Council meeting. These questions are as follows:

1. Why has the environmental lobby made a 180-degree turn on organic fertilizer? For the last 30 years they have told us the way to save the environment and our health is through organic farming, which gets most of its plant nutrients from animal manure. Now they're telling us that animal manure is "toxic waste." If animal manure is toxic waste, shouldn't organic farming be outlawed?

2. Why are the eco-zealots recommending outdoor hogs, whose wastes wash into the nearest stream with every storm, yet oppose confinement farms that have zero-discharge waste management — saving the wastes to use as organic fertilizer?

3. Why do environmentalists propose a limit on herd numbers per farm? If specialized farms can produce more meat from less land and manage their wastes responsibly, why limit numbers?

4. Why was last year's outbreak of pfiesteria in the tributaries of the Chesapeake blamed on farm run-off when the region was in the middle of a drought? Where did the supposed poultry run-off come from? Why is pfiesteria still blamed on nutrients from poultry farms when both a scientific panel and a Citizens Committee cleared both farm run-off and poultry nutrients?

5. Why do North Carolina hog farms get blamed for polluting the state's rivers when the Black River, which drains the most intensive hog-production region in the state, is rated "excellent" for water quality, and was recently named one of the state's outstanding resource waters? Why has the nitrate loading of the Black River gone down in the years since 1975, while the number of hogs in its watershed has increased by five-fold?

6. Why does agricultural run-off get blamed for the nitrates flowing into the Gulf of Mexico when virtually every major city from Pittsburgh to Denver drains into the Mississippi watershed? (We've spent billions of public dollars on modern sewage treatment plants that still flush half of the nitrogen and phosphate from human wastes into our streams.)

7. Where's the math? The U.S. Senate Agriculture Committee's Ranking Minority Member, Tom Harkin, released a report stating the "600 million chickens produce as much nitrogen as a city of almost 500,000." Using his math it would be equally fair to say that the Delmarva poultry farms produce about one-tenth or less of the nitrogen of cities that are also in the Chesapeake watershed. The American Farm Bureau used the EPA's own numbers to show that it would have been accurate for the EPA to state that 96 percent of the nation's rivers and streams are not impaired by agriculture.

8. Do environmentalists understand that if the nitrate levels in the Missouri-Mississippi river system were reduced enough to eliminate the hypoxic zone in the Gulf of Mexico, there would be virtually no fish? (Most of the nutrients for the world's fish come from rivers that drain high-quality land.)

9. Do the eco-activists understand that confinement livestock and poultry production not only saves more land for wildlife, and keeps streams healthier, but also provides new job opportunities in rural America where family farming has failed? North Carolina's Duplin County was the poorest place in the state for a century before confinement hog farming.

10. Where do the opponents of confinement hog farming get their information? The bibliography of Senator Harkin's report cites 15 sources, and eight of them were stories from the popular press. Only two could offer scientific credentials.

Now Is The Time

By John Schwartz

Lancaster County Agricultural Agent

To Calibrate Forage Seeder

Marvin Hall, Penn State Agronomy Department, reports a recent study found alfalfa farmers were applying vastly different amounts of seed at planting time. With uncoated seed, the seeding rate varied from 14 to 21 pounds per acre While this is close to the recommended rate of 15 to 18 pounds per acre, the variation could be expensive and reduce the amount of acres planted compared to what was planned

A pound of alfalfa seed contains approximately 220,000 seeds The number will vary from 196,000 to 224,000 seeds per pound depending on the variety. In addition some seed is rounder and flows through seeding equipment easier The recommended seeding rate is 75 to 90 seeds per square foot

By calibrating their forage seeder, alfalfa farmers should receive a more uniform seeding while minimizing the costs. An easy way to do this is to spread a tarp on the ground and pull the planter over it. Then select one square foot areas and count the number of seeds. If you change seed varieties, you should recalibrate.

To Evaluate Winter Wheat Stands

While most wheat fields look good at this time of year, some fields should be evaluated to determine if their potential production is worth keeping. According to Robert Anderson, Lancaster County Extension Agronomy Agent, if stands are thin, total production will be reduced. To check the potential production of a wheat stand, first determine the length of row needed to equal one square foot. To do this, divide 144 by the row width in inches. For 8 inch rows the distance is 18 inches

After determining the length of row that is needed to equal one square foot, count the number of plants in that distance at several locations across the field. Then determine the average number of plants (not tillers) per square foot of row. If you have an average of over 24 plants the yield potential is near 100 per cent. If the number is between 18 and 21, the yield potential is between 90 and 95 per cent.

When the number is between 15 to 18 plants, yield potential drops to 75 to 85 per cent. Once the number of plants is between 12 and 14, the yield potential is only 60 to 70 per cent. When plant numbers are 7 or lower, then the yield potential is 50 peer cent or less Fields with low yield potential will result in more income if planted to another crop or harvested early as a silage and planting the next crop in a timely manner

To Prune Branches Correctly

Trees resist the entry and spread of disease and wood rotting fungi by forming protective barriers that isolate injured wood, according to Dr. Timothy Elkner, Lancaster County Extension Horticultural Agent. Contained within the branch collar (the flared base of most branches) is an important barrier or protection zone that prevents the spread of decay

The branch collar and the raised strip of bark, called the branch bark ridge, mark this important boundary between the branch and trunk. Pruning cuts that injure or eliminate the collar, destroy the protection zone and leave vulnerable tissues open to invasion and infection. Therefore, the proper pruning cut is made to the outside of the branch bark ridge and collar.

Flush cuts must be avoided because they destroy the protection zone and leave large wounds that are difficult for trees to defend.

Background Scripture:
John 6:1-59
Devotional Reading:
Isaiah 55:1-11

Thirty-one years ago I purchased and read a remarkable book, Twelve Baskets Full, by Margaret T. Applegarth. It is a book of unique and profound story-meditations based upon the account of Jesus feeding the 5,000. Few books have excited and inspired me as this book, the obvious intention of which is to help us see deeply beyond the raw details of the story.

This sixth chapter of John is written to help us look to the deeper and abiding meanings lurking below the surface of the obvious. We know the facts. Jesus and his disciples are beside the Sea of Galilee where they have been hunted down by a large multitude of people who have witnessed or heard about Jesus' signs. But these people will be hungry, and neither Jesus nor his little band have the bread to feed them or the money to buy it.

Then Jesus performs another sign: using a lad's five barley loaves and two fish, he is able to feed the whole crowd of 5,000 people. More significantly, when all have eaten their fill, there are enough fragments left over to fill 12 baskets. This is the only so-called "miracle" (Jesus called them 'signs') to appear in all four gospels.

A GREATER 'SIGN'

Despite the spectacular nature of this "sign," the deeper significance is an even greater 'sign' and 'miracle.' If the evangelists were simply telling us that Jesus had the power to feed 5,000 people with five barley loaves and two fish, that's pretty impressive — but I'm not sure what it has to do with me and my life. The real meaning is so much more spectacular and mind-boggling than the mere multiplication of matter.

The next day people, finding him and his disciples gone, get into boats to find him on the other side of the lake. Puzzled, they want to know: "Rabbi, when did you come here?" But, as he so often does, Jesus ignores the superficial level of their question and cuts to the heart of the matter: "Truly, truly I say to you, you seek me, not because you saw signs, but because you ate your fill of the loaves" (6:25,26).

This response by Jesus always puzzled me, because it seemed to me that they followed him to the other side precisely because they did see his 'signs.' But today it occurred to me for the first time that he is really saying that, although they saw the signs they didn't really see that toward which the signs were pointing. These people had seen only the multiplication of loaves and fishes. But this was only the medium, not the message

NO EXPIRATION DATE

Then Jesus says what they had apparently missed: "Do not labor for the food which perishes, but for the food which endures to eternal life . . ." (6:27). We are no less blind than they were, for we too labor for food which perishes, instead of that which nourishes us to eternal life. So, the first thing Jesus says to them and us is that there is a bread, a source of nourishment that, unlike the things of this world, does not perish.

Actually, Jesus is talking about all material things. No matter how wonderful they may taste or feel, they are fleeting in their satisfaction and sustenance. If you look carefully there is an expiration date on each one of them! Again and again they need to be replenished. "Your fathers ate the manna in the wilderness, and they died" (6:49). So it is with the things we buy to eat and drink, the playthings we get to amuse ourselves, the objects we accumulate to persuade ourselves that we are getting somewhere in life.

Not only is there a bread which does not perish, Jesus tells them: "I am the bread of life . . . if anyone eats of this, he will live forever . . ." (6:48,51). You and I know today that Jesus was speaking figuratively about himself, but many who heard him were outraged to hear him say that they must "eat" this "bread." They could not stretch their minds to think of anything except the blatantly material which could not satisfy them or sustain them. But they could not be induced to look at the spiritual behind the material.

So, whatever it is that you desire and set your heart on, check the expiration label before you spend too much for it. There is only one reality that has no expiration date: eternal life with Christ.

Md. Brown Swiss Breeders Celebrate

CYNTHIA WARNER
President
Md. Brown Swiss Association

FREDERICK, Md. — "The best year in the history of the breed — 1998 will be remembered as a great year for Brown Swiss."

That was the clear and enthusiastic message of John Meyer, executive secretary of the National Brown Swiss Cattle Breeders Association, who spoke at the recent annual meeting of the Maryland Brown Swiss Association.

Total Brown Swiss registrations for 1998 were 11,494; the largest number of registrations recorded in years.

Transfers were also up, as 5,406 head were transferred in 1998, and nearly 1,000 people purchased their very first Brown Swiss.

"Also, over 200 new breeders in two years is another real testimonial to the nationwide interest in Brown Swiss," Meyer said.

Currently, the Brown Swiss cow is the hottest commodity in the registered dairy market. "The demand on the domestic front is extremely high," Meyer added. "Their demand is high due to the breed's longevity, production, and their ability to milk over a longer period of time."

"There are many 'Black & White' breeders adding Brown Swiss to their herds," said Meyer. "The MCP (Multiple Component Pricing) has a great deal to do with the growth we are seeing because Brown Swiss have this higher component advantage built in."

Meyer also noted 1998 was the first year since 1990 that the Association made a profit, and gave credit to the National Board for their vision and courage to change the financial condition.

"(The board's) committment to making sound business plans, plotting a roadmap for success, downsizing where necessary, cooperative programs with other breeds, and gaining stability in management were the the main factors in turning the association around," he said.

"The results are showing in the bottom line, and also in the demand for Brown Swiss, which points to a bigger and brighter future for the breed.

"The success of the Brown Swiss Association is in participation and staying involved — and that's what breeders in the state associations are doing, just like here in Maryland," Meyer said.

Meyer also commended Maryland breeders for putting the time and energy into the National Ayrshire and Brown Swiss Convention to be hoste in Maryland.

"Marylanders were real visionaries to get two breeds together for a national convention — the first time it's been done — and you are receiving a lot of national attention and recognition for your foward thinking as we approach the 21st century. I know it's a challenge, and I know it's going to be a great convention."

In other business, Maryland Brown Swiss youth directors Howard and Norma Fleming, and youth advisor Becky Long Chaney, presented junior awards.

Highlighting the evening was the announcement of the Maryland record book winners, who were: Amanda Valentine, senior winner; Mary Kathryn Archer, intermediate winner; and Suzanne Purdue, junior winner.

A $500 scholarship was presented to Nicholas Culler, who attends Delaware Valley College, majoring in landscaping and horticulture.

Jason Fleming received a savings bond for being the top candy salesman for the Maryland Junior's spring fund-raising activity.

The juniors honored two individuals who have been instrumental in the success of Maryland's dairy youth program, and the Maryland Brown Swiss Association. Recipients were recognized for their dedicated service. They were John Morris and Dr. Lee Majeskie.

Production award winners were also recognized.

Scott and Judy Hood of Middletown, Maryland, won for top production among herds with 10 or more cows. Joy and Tom Crothers of Oxford won second place honors.

Leah and Mike Birch were the top winners among milking herds with nine or fewer cows. John and Julie Mayer won second place.

High producing cows were recognized according to age of animal. The top producing junior 2-year-old was owned by Dwayne Bell; the top senior 2-year-old was

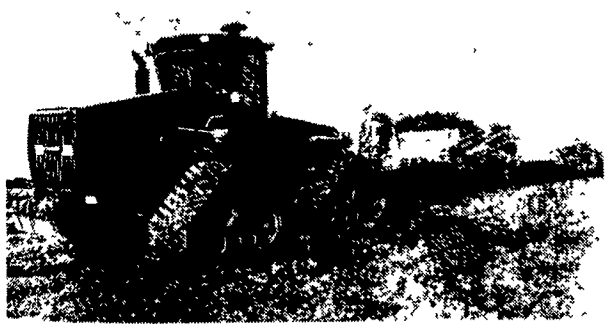
ATTENTION EXCAVATORS
NEW CONCEPT REVEALED



Excavators are discovering a better way to move dirt! You see, the Case IH Steiger Quadrac isn't just for agriculture anymore More and more Steiger Quadtracs are pulling Reynolds scrapers and pans . . moving dirt for considerably less. Best of all, the Steiger Quadtrac is exceptional when it comes to working in wet conditions. See for yourself how using a Steiger Quadtrac can generate additional profits for you!

A TRUE STORY

Wilkinson Farms had been using Steiger tractors in agriculture for several years Thinking that the Steiger would also be effective in construction applications, Wilkinson Farms formed Technivate, a construction company using Reynolds pans and scrapers with a couple of Steiger tractors The results have been phenominal. At last count, Technovate operates a fleet of 13 Case IH Steiger tractors moving dirt with Reynolds pans.

Jersey Message Positive For Youth, Adults At PJ

CAROLYN N. MOYER
Bradford Co. Correspondent

TUNKHANNOCK (Wyoming Co.) — "These are exciting times in the Jersey breed," said Owen Bewley, assistant manager of the Jersey Marketing Service, as he addressed Jersey breeders from Pennsylvania and surrounding states at the 1999 Pennsylvania Annual Jersey Meeting.

"We've never had as much demand or excitement in the Jersey breed as we're seeing today."

The evening was also an exciting time for Crystal Joy Rassau, Sarver, as she was named the 1999 Pennsylvania Jersey Queen. Alternates are Corissa Coolbaugh, Canton, and Heather Yurkanin, Columbia Cross Roads.

In a meeting that combined junior and senior award presentations, fellowship and business updates, Bewley outlined where producers stand today as Jersey breeders and where the future might lead.

"There were 55,000 Jerseys registered last year," said Bewley. "Pennsylvania ranks number three in number of animals registered behind California and Ohio."

Pennsylvania also ranks sixth in transfer activity and has the third highest participation in the REAP program, an all-inclusive registry program administered by the American Jersey Cattle Association (AJCA).

Paul Chittenden

Bewley then outlined three objectives of the AJCA: To help increase production of Jersey milk, to help increase the value of Jersey milk, and to help increase the demand for Jerseys in the U.S.

Other AJCA projects include the implementation of a powerful new computer system and the consideration of an expansion program which would provide a mechanism to register Jersey crossbreeds after five generations of Jersey matings.

Paul Chittenden, AJCA president, commented on the expansion program. He foresees an increase in crossbreeding among Holstein breeders who can't find Jerseys to buy.

"Component pricing is coming October 1. If these breeders can't buy Jersey cows, they will buy Jersey semen and put it in their Holstein cows. Somebody has got to identify those animals. There's a financial opportunity for the Jersey association and an opportunity to bring in new people. The question is, who takes advantage of this potential?" reported Chittenden.

"The board didn't take this program lightly. But 10 to 12 years down the road we may see purebred Holstein breeders of today milking Jerseys because of our program."

On the lighter side, Pat Rassau handed out youth awards to several Jersey junior members.

In the achievement contest, Theron LaTourette placed first in the junior division. Crystal Rassau placed first in the senior division followed by Emily Norman and Katie Harwick.

Lindsay Fischer took first-place honors in the scrapbook competition, and Theron LaTourette placed second. Amy Kaucher placed first in the senior division of the scrapbook contest.

Paige Black garnered first place in the first-year award competition. Matthew Fischer placed second.

Mark Norman topped the Jacob M. Brunges Production Contest with a five-year, three-month record on Normandell Skyline Wanda. In a 305-day lactation, she produced 19,790 pounds of milk, 932 pounds of fat, and 791 pounds of protein, a mature equivalent of 19,988 pounds of milk, 951 pounds of fat, and 808 pounds of protein.

Emily Norman placed second in the production contest with Normandell Berretta Destiny. She produced 19,104 pounds of milk, 803 pounds of fat, and 719 pounds of protein at three years, six months, with a mature equivalent of 20,059 pounds of milk, 827 pounds of fat, and 729 pounds of protein.

The third place production contest winner was Ellen Norman with Normandell Brigadier Breanne. Her record at six years, five months was 18,265 pounds of milk, 927 pounds of fat, and 660 pounds of protein for a mature equivalent of 19,361 pounds of milk, 983 pounds of fat, and 702 pounds of protein.

Rounding out the top five are Joy McConnell with JEM Andy Prancer Pumpkin and Jacob Chyle with Chyle-Land Dairy Dunker Shelly.

The PJCA also awards scholarships to deserving Jersey youth. Jonathan Campbell, Roberta McConnell, and Crystal Rassau

In the adult arena, Art and Margot Spangenberg, Summer Hope Jerseys, Starrucca, earned the Distinguished Service Award for their work in the Jersey breed. In addition to raising outstanding Jerseys and having the distinction of being the high CPI herd in the U.S. several years ago, Margot has served as the editor of Jerseys East (formerly the Jerseyletter) for 10 years. They have shifted their operation from milking cows to raising heifers and miniature horses.

Named the outstanding Young Jersey Dairymen were Doug and Julie Martin, Chambersburg.

Duane Norman was on hand to present the Norman Genetic Award to Ralaine Jerseys. PJCA secretary-treasurer announced the production awards. Ralaine Jerseys also received the plaque for being the Pennsylvania DHIA High Protein Herd.

David Norman also highlighted the Pennsylvania high lactation averages by age and cheese yield dollars.

TUNKHANNOCK (Wyoming Co.) — A choice of January calves consigned by Stuart and Elaine Noble, Gillett, topped the Pennsylvania Jersey sale April 10 here at the Shadowbrook Convention Center.

At the bid of $3,250, New Direction Jerseys, Elizabethtown, chose Nobledale View Vertical-ET and left the full sister, Nobledale View Value-ET, to return to Nobledale Farm.

The second high sales mark was made at $2,250 by three animals. New Direction Jerseys with Tucker Johnson and Norman Nabholtz sent Alma Renn Allure - ET, purchased by Elaine Noble; Robert and Helene Dreisbach consigned Wilderness Berretta Merci, purchased by Jack Rotz; and William Hunsinger sent Stoney Acres Montana Monnie, purchased by Brenda Robson Hodder.

The Pennsylvania State sale average on 47 lots was $1,411, with a total sales revenue of $66,300.

The Pot of Gold sale, designed specifically for junior members, averaged $1,345 on five calves. Twenty-five percent of the proceeds from the Pot of Gold sale will be returned to the junior members whose animals have the highest records in their first lactations. Awards will be made in 2001.

Wayne County Farm Bureau Raises $11,500 To Support Apple Antidumping Efforts

WEBSTER, N.Y. — Wayne County Farm Bureau raised about $11,500 here to support the efforts of the U.S. Apple Association, which is expected to launch an antidumping case against foreign suppliers.

Below-cost foreign apple juice concentrate imports since 1995 have severely impacted U.S. apple growers, causing more than $92 million in lost revenue. The efforts by Wayne County Farm Bureau and growers throughout the U.S. hopefully will result in a higher domestic juice price and a more level international playing field.

Apple growers in Wayne and other counties throughout the state and country have seen prices drop drastically because of imports from China and other foreign sources. Farm Bureau raised the money to support the antidumping suit by the U.S. Apple. "We're working to raise some money to go forward with this lawsuit," said Jerry Youngman, vice president of the Wayne County Farm Bureau. "It's going to cost between a million and a million and half dollars. We need all the help we can get to pull the industry together.

Carl Loop, vice president of the American Farm Bureau Federation, was the guest speaker at the fund-raiser in Webster, March 27. Loop shared his experiences with similar antidumping cases and spoke about future trade talks.

"We need to take a hard look at what we need in trade agreements," said Loop. "It's important to find out how we can have some input and how we can get our concerns addressed." He said producers need to be involved to look out for their own interests.

New York ranks third nationally in apple production behind Washington and Michigan. The 1998 state apple crop totaled 1.01 billion pounds and was valued at $114 million. Wayne County is the largest apple-producing county in the state with annual production totaling 352 million pounds. Loss of markets due to imports not only impacts the growers here, but the entire economy of the county.

Allied Milk Producers Hold 49th Annual Meeting

GAY BROWNLEE
Somerset Co. Correspondent

JOHNSTOWN (Cambria Co.) — Members of the Allied Milk Producers' Cooperative Inc. who attended the 49th annual meeting at the Masonic Temple heard reports from representatives of the programs they support.

Allied membership encompasses nine counties.

Besides radio advertising and the dairy princess program, Ag In the Classroom ranks among the most successful places Allied targets a percentage of its budget.

One guest of honor, Celeste Meck, an elementary teacher in the Shade-Central City School District in Somerset County is a good example of that investment.

Meck went to Ag In the Classroom, held at Penn State and returned to implement an outstanding program for her kids that took top honors in the state.

"I thought I was knowledgeable about Ag until I went there," she said. "What I learned was how little I know."

Meck told Allied members that her job is to get the brain open after which her job is to pour in knowledge.

"The trick is to keep the mind open," she said.

"You would be surprised to know how many children don't know what pork is," she said. "Meat is meat to them."

Learning that gelatin has its origin in pork stunned some of the children, she reported.

Making butter in the classroom was super fun until time to taste it on a salted cracker. Typically, the youngsters were hesitant to sample what they had created until a classmate who was overcome by curiosity lead the way.

The other aspect was the nature trail which was already a pet project of Meck's at her school. The Penn State emphasis on agriculture, even on an outdoor path, enhanced everything she knew.

"It was a grueling week at Penn State," she reported. "It was no vacation."

She added, "It is very refreshing because you are with educators from all over the state.

"I learned a lot from Ag In the Classroom," Meck said, affirming Allied's support of the program. "My boys and girls are learning about your world. You have given us the opportunity to keep feeding their brains."

Radio personality Brad Lorence from WYSN/WSRA, not only performed the duties of master of ceremonies for the event, but reported on the various advertising mechanisms that Allied uses to bring its dairy message to the public through the medium of radio.

"Radio is very personal, Lorence said. He said that unlike television where people talk about a favorite show, with radio they talk about their favorite station.

It is something they usually listen to all day, so the dairy commercials are heard over and over.

The ice cream parties that occur in July are a real treat because the name of a business is selected and announced over the air. The dairy princess then goes to the business and acts as hostess by serving dairy treats.

Lorence reported that the most gratifying of these was last year when a party was given for the employees of a bank in Salisbury, Somerset, County, after the town had been ravaged by a strong tornado.

Allied is a sponsor of the Keystone Games that will be hosted by the city of Johnstown. Every news release promotion that precedes this major event (that is expected to generate some $4 million for the local economy), will recognize the Allied Milk Producers' Cooperative Inc., according to representatives of the Cambria County Convention Bureau who attended.

Best of all, "milk" has been endorsed as the drink of choice for the Keystone Games, which get under way at the end of July.

Dairy princesses — Amanda Sollenberger from Blair County, Melissa Powell from Somerset County, and Bridget Farabaugh from Cambria County — each received an additional $300 from Allied for having met 75 percent of the responsibilities they assumed with the ambassadorial position.

Lowell Friedline, board secretary, presented the checks.

At the outset of her reign $200 is presented to a dairy princess.

Those who couldn't attend were Beckie Fuffaner from Armstrong County, Vicki Henry from Clearfield County, and Kristen Freemer from Jefferson County.

Janet Harding, a state director of the dairy princess program, told the group about Allied's contributions to the state program and explained how dairy princesses are trained to fulfill their role.

Three dairy princesses receive monetary achievement awards from Allied Milk Producers' Cooperative Inc. From the left are Blair County Dairy Princess Amanda Sollenberger, Somerset County Dairy Princess Melissa Powell, Allied board secretary Lowell Friedline, and Cambria County Dairy Princess Bridget Farabaugh. Also helping with the presentation is Cambria County Alternate Dairy Princess Brandi Krug.

Board president Dave Myers touched on critical issues confronting today's dairymen and reported statistics about the consumption of milk as well as what is happening in the cheese market.

Dorothy Naugle, dairy marketing specialist for Allied Milk Producers' Cooperative Inc., had a busy year attending events in the various counties.

Pageants to sporting events, fund-raisers, radio spots, schools, festivals and meetings, to ordering supplies for inventory, were all part of her duties.

QUESTION: We have recently changed nutritionists and the new diet cuts back protein and adds more corn. How long should it take to implement the change? When should we expect to see results?

ANSWER: This is what is referred to as a loaded question.

No matter how I answer, I have a good chance of being wrong.

Instead, let's explore some thoughts on how to evaluate the recommended changes.

The first question concerning how long to implement this feeding change is dictated by several factors. We all imagine that ruminant animals respond to diet changes much different than we do, because of fiber digesters and grain diegesters within the rumen of the cow. These microbes, or bugs if you will, multiply in response to the type of material that we supply to them via the diet.

When it becomes necessary to make changes that dictate the amount of fiber and grain we supply the cow, we should do so in small increments. We want the cow to change the rumen contents over a period of time to ensure that the rumen environment does not destroy the bugs themselves.

The first thing we can do as dairymen, is learn how to physically determine the changes in our cows as we change their diets.

Manure evaluation can play a major role to give us a quick evaluation of diet changes.

I was on this farm shortly after the corn was increased and the protein decreased. We walked through the cows in all groups, as is standard procedure with me, and I asked if the cows always had that much corn in their manure. The herdsman said he was quite sure this was something that had recently changed. We then discussed the diet changes made within the last couple of days.

The diet was changed too suddenly. The cows had not adjusted to the additional corn being supplied and were passing it out in the manure.

Decreasing the protein may have been appropriate, but should have been tried only after the cows adjusted to the corn change.

These two changes will actually work against each other because the increased corn will need additional protein for its digestion regardless of what was fed for protein before.

The two (components) could have been adjusted in small increments, but these cows tell us that the change was too severe.

We also discussed the chance that the corn meal was of a different texture than before. The original texture was not known, but it will be tracked in the future, since physical-grinding characteristics can alter the way cows use feed components, such as corn meal.

Cedar Crest Young Farmers Honor Schadler, Member Achievements

VERNON ACHENBACH JR.
Lancaster Farming Staff

SCHAEFFERSTOWN (Lebanon Co.) — The Cedar Crest Young Farmer Assocation held is 35th annual banquet last week at the Schaefferstown Fire Hall to honor members and share in fellowship.

Jason Krall of Cornwall presided. Dick Moore, retired Cedar Crest High School agriculture teacher, is the advisor.

As part of the proceedings, awards were presented for quality production of hay, high moisture corn, and silage, and milk. First place winners received plaques.

Leon and Trudy Seyfert received first place quality awards for alfalfa, mixed hay, and corn silage.

Glen and Linda Krall of Cornwall received first place quality awards for hay silage and high moisture ear corn.

Dean and Miriam Patches received an award for quality high moisture shelled corn.

Jerry and Edna Musser received an award for having the dairy herd with the lowest somatic cell count, at 166,000. Mark and Stephanie Patches were second with a 187,000 count.

Scott and Karen Nolt received the award for the greatest increase in milk production, with an average of 5,244 pounds milk per cow.

Ammon and Brenda Peiffer were recognized for second place production of quality alfalfa hay and a herd average milk production increase of 1,540 pounds.

Others who received second place honors included Dick and Carol Kreider for quality production of mixed hay; Alvin and Marian Martin for hay silage; Mike and Suzette Arnold for high moisture shelled corn; Tom and Shirley Krall for quality corn silage; and Jeff and Karen Zuck for high moisture ear corn.

In other honors, Alletta Schadler was named an honorary Young Farmer, in recognition of her years of support for agricultural and continuing adult education, as well as support of the Young Farmer program.

Schadler has announced her retirement, to be effective in December, after serving for 30 years in the Extension system, and after many years of serving as Lebanon County Extension director, as well as interim regional director. She has conducted and organized many education programs, and over the years has repeatedly stated a belief that Extension works best when the people it is designed to serve are allowed to become involved in its programs — in program design and presentation support.

Shirley Krall also was recognized for winning the state Young Farmer spokesperson for agriculture contest. Though she had previously received the award, during the Cedar Crest YF banquet it was returned to her with the proper engraving.

As part of her prerequisite duties for the national Young Farmer spokesperson for agriculture contest, set to be held at the Hershey Lodge and Convention Center in mid-December, Krall also gave a speech she wrote that earned her the state title.

Her presentation dealt with the United States' people's current lack of a common understanding about agricultural production of commodities and food, as well as a lack of knowledge about the origins of American foods offered in stores.

Among other suggestions, she said that when she tries to explain such things as volumes of water consumed by a cow each day, she tries to use something that is commonly understood. For example, she said that, instead of saying that a cow drinks about 50 gallons of water per day, she says a cow drinks a bathtub full of water; when she talks about ear tags for identification, she compares them to widely popular fashon of pierced ears; football fields are compared to acres.

She said that visitors to farms should be given strict guidelines about what they can do, and that they must exhibit respect for the property, but that there are hands-on activities that can easily be set up to allow children, especially, to touch some things. She suggested such things as allowing youth to bottle feed young calves, or milk by hand, or touch feed coming out of silo.

She said that while a TMR or silage may be uninteresting everyday matter to dairy farmers, it is of keen interest by those who don't see it often or who have never seen it.

The Kralls have been recognized many times for the reception they give visitors and the welcome they have provided for many different school groups, business groups, groups from different nations, etc.

Also recognized during the banquet were Cornwall Lebanon School District board members and administrators; past president Scott Nolt; Andrew and Rebecca Ill who were the 1998 Region VII winners of the outstanding young farmer award for those aged under 30 years; and Ken and Rhoda Reist who were 1998 Region VII state winners of the outstanding young farmer award for those aged 30 or older.

A number of door prizes were also presented, ranging from hats, sprayers and seed corn to diesel oil and hydraulic fluid.

In a slide show presentation, Linda Krall reviewed a trip that she and husband Glen shared with two other couples to attend a national Young Farmer Institute.

According to Krall, the trio made several sight-seeing stops and visits during the trip.

She showed slides of grain corn and silos in Iowa. A pickup truck parked at the base of one of the corn piles was more than dwarfed, and pile ventilation appeared to be almost large enough to drive the truck into it. She said they sat and watched the operations for some time, watching trucks and rail come and go from the immense amounts of grain corn.

She also showed slides of a recently built freestall dairy operation that demonstrated the trend toward even higher specialization within the dairy industry.

The 912-foot long freestall building housed 2,000 milking cows and were milked in a double-50 parlor by hired immigrant labor. Its owners are not involved with the hands-on or day-to-day operations.

Linda said that the business focuses solely on milk production. Not only does the operation not use artificial insemination, Krall said they use inexpensive beef bulls to impregnate the herd, and the calves are removed immediately.

According to Krall, the owners were in the process of constructing an identical operation nearby.

One of the slides showed a 5,000 head beef feedlot operation in Nebrasks that uses a nitrogen and phosphorus nutrient management plan.

The slide showed that the animals were kept on a very long sloped lot that drained into a holding pond. All stormwater and manure ran into the lot, eliminating labor and energy expenses, while containing the flow of nutrients.

Krall also showed a slide of an elk raising business that focuses on selling antlers in velvet for the dietayr supplement market.

According to Krall, the owner of the elk herd is a full-time electrician who has the elk herd as a sideline business. Annually, he ships about 1,000 pounds of refrigerated velvet antlers to Canada, where they are then sent to Asia for processing, and returned for retail in the United States.

She said the trip to the leadership institution was very worthwhile and that she would recommend it. She also said that driving, rather than flying, and visiting various sights and farms suited them best.

From the left, Lebanon County Extension Director Alletta Schadler is presented with a plaque distinguishing her as an honorary Young Farmer of the Cedar Crest Young Farmer Association, while association chapter member Shirley Krall is honored for qualifying as a state winner and national competitor in an Young Farmer spokesperson for agriculture contest.

From the left, quality and production awards are presented to Leon Seyfert, Glen Krall, and Scott Nolt. Seyfert and wife Trudy were honored for quality production of corn silage, alfalfa hay, and mixed hay. Krall recieved high moisture ear corn and hay silage. Nolt was recognized for having the highest milk production increase in the association.

FOCUS

Results in this case were seen almost immediately and not for the best. Changes made should not cause as severe a reaction as seen here.

Properly formulated and fed diets should show no physical changes within the cows, especially as the manure is evaluated.

If we make changes with with this in mind, then the cows will tell us the rate of change to follow. We can then look to our DHIA records to evaluate the success of the changes we made.

Average Farm Feed Costs For Handy Reference

To help farmers across the state to have handy reference of commodity input costs in their feeding operations for DHIA record sheets or to develop livestock feed cost data, here's last week's average costs of various ingredients as compiled from regional reports across the state of Pennsylvania.

Remember, these are averages, so you will need to adjust your figures up or down according to your location and the quality of your crop.

Is There A Packing House In Future For Regional Growers?

ing houses would require from growers will be discussed next Thursday, April 22, from 1 p.m.-3 p.m. at the Lancaster Farm and Home Center.

There, industry representatives, auctioneers, growers familiar with the packing house industry, and others will discuss ideas for a Lancaster-based packing house, according to Jeff Stoltzfus, Eastern Lancaster County School District Adult Farmer adviser.

Dan Schantz, Zionsville, a greenhouse operator and auctioneer from Zionsville who maintains about 1,000 acres of fall ornamentals and operates his own packing house, will speak at the meeting. Schantz will explain options for growers and provide scenarios of contracts offered from packing house.

Another speaker will be Rob Amsterdam, Kennett Square, president of Habets Trading USA, an importer of Holland vegetables, including hothouse tomatoes and peppers. Amsterdam will provide insights from his experience with a packing house that operated for about seven years in Mifflinburg, near the Buffalo Valley Auction.

For years, according to Stoltzfus, adult farmer adviser, the local auctions have been trying to entice the larger chains, including Acme, Giant, Wise, and Pathmark, into buying local produce. However, the chains require large amounts of consistently sized and packaged product, delivered cool, to distribution warehouses.

While the local auctions have been adequate for small-scale and private supermarkets, chains have been supplied on the local level, directly from growers, or from major distribution and packaging houses.

The lack of standardization and cooling for produce has kept the larger chains out of the local produce auctions, including Leola and Weaverland, during the growing season.

"There is potential for a packing house in this area," Stoltzfus noted. He is working with a group, including Tim Elkner, Lancaster horticultural agent; Larry Yeager, regional marketing agent; Schantz, Amsterdam; Lloyd Horst; Chris Powell, farmer; and other interested parties to examine the possibilities of a locally supported packing house.

"Labor is an issue in the large packing houses, but the meeting will address that," he said.

There is nothing concrete in the works, according to Stoltzfus and Schantz. Right now, the potential includes a Lancaster-based house to begin operation perhaps in the next year or so. Growers could supply the packing house from a 100-mile radius.

The house, a $1 million operation, according to Stoltzfus, would have to measure about 100,000 square feet and have suitable loading docks. The building would have to have hydrocoolers, so a water source would be required.

To interest the chains, the farmers will have to "move to the next level," said Stoltzfus. "We need to standardize the pack and we need to cool it."

Dan Schantz, Zionsville, said that he operates his own packing house for fall ornamentals. The Zionsville house includes two different buildings, including one measuring 60-feet by 300- feet and another at 40-feet by 70-feet. The houses have a number of coolers, including portable vacuum coolers for gourds and minipumpkins.

Schantz's packing house employs day labor out of Philadelphia, including about 150 at the peak.

"The auctions are at the limit on how far and how many acres they can handle," Schantz said. "The larger buyers, the supermarkets, don't buy at the auctions."

The proposed packing house "in no way competes with the local auctions," Schantz said. "It actually might complement the auctions."

Many growers in the region are losing tobacco acreage with the severely depressed tobacco prices and a lackluster market for grains. The packing house may provide supplemental income for growers.

Amsterdam, of Habets Trading USA, serves on the board of directors of the Pennsylvania Vegetable Growers Association. The association has been looking into alternative markets for vegetable growers for quite some time.

A few years ago, Amsterdam worked a sales arrangement for a packing house in Mifflinburg. The packing house, near the Buffalo Valley Auction site, operated from 1989-1996, according to Amsterdam. That experience with the growers and buyers provided vital information to set up a viable packing house in the Lancaster area.

For growers to really benefit from the house, they would have to devote a bulk percentage of their acres to a certain crop and plan that crop for delivery to the packing house. For sweet corn growers, according to experts, that would include 10 or more acres of sweet corn. About 4,000 dozen ears of corn can fit on a tractor-trailer, cooled.

According to Stoltzfus, 4,000 dozen sweet corn ears, or about one trailer load, equals about 4-4.5 acres.

For tomatoes, 5-10 acres at a picking would be required to supply the packing house and large-scale buyers.

In years past, a cooperative based in Blue Ball tried selling bulk commodity to chains. However, varieties of sweet corn and cantaloupe were few with little shelf life.

These days, Stoltzfus noted, the demand for locally grown produce exists for the chains. Huge supermarkets in Philadelphia, Harrisburg, and Baltimore tout the benefits of "Lancaster grown" produce. And the varieties taste better and have a lot better shelf life.

The packing house idea is "not for every grower," said Amsterdam of Habets Trading USA. "They would have to have a certain economy of size. There would have to be a critical mass of tonnage to justify a sales person."

All the major chains, he noted, were represented at the Mifflinburg packing house, including Weis, Giant, Redner's, Acme, A & P from Baltimore, Pathmark from New Jersey, and markets in the New York City region. They even had buyers from Texas.

"We had growers who signed up and committed a certain percentage of the product in bulk," he said.

A new packing house intrigues the vegetable growers association and many who want alternative markets, in light of depressed farm commodity prices.

"It represents an incredible opportunity," said Amsterdam.

Honey Loans

POTTSVILLE (Schuylkill Co.) — USDA has implemented a honey loan program for honey drawn in 1998.

Producers may borrow 56 cents per pound on the honey currently in storage in eligible containers. All honey must be inspected prior to issuance of the loan.

The loans mature in 9 months and interest for the loans will accrue at 5.675 percent if the loan is disbursed in March.

USDA will not accept delivery of the honey in satisfaction of the loan. The final date to request a loan on 98 honey is May 7, 1999.

Industrial Hemp Growing Meeting Topic

ANDY ANDREWS
Lancaster Farming Staff

NEW HOLLAND (Lancaster Co.) — More than 200 farmers and agri-industry representatives were registered Friday afternoon for an informational meeting, described by a proponent as "historic," about growing hemp in the area.

Farmers, industry representatives, and curiosity seekers were set to meet for the presentation on hemp growing and processing at Yoder's Restaurant in New Holland.

Speaking to Lancaster Farming on Thursday this week, Shawn Patrick House, Lancaster Hemp Company, said the event was "historic" because it showed how important hemp products have been since the U.S. was founded and the industries that still rely on hemp production.

For too long, according to House, the government has been restricting what farmers have been allowed to grow. The cousin to the illegal marijuana plant, industry hemp has gotten a wrongful and undeserved bad reputation, according to the hemp broker.

"If you restrict people, you restrict ideas and potential," he said.

He noted that in 1937, Popular Mechanics noted that 25,000 products are made from hemp, what the magazine called the "new billion dollar crop," he said. Hemp can be used to make "cellophane to dynamite to food to textiles," said House.

The meeting was scheduled to be an informational fact- gathering session for farmers and industry representatives, according to Jane Balmer, speaker at the event.

Balmer noted that, in light of extraordinarily depressed tobacco prices, farmers need alternatives.

Hemp growing can be one of them, noted House.

House said he has taken his hemp product display on the road in the past, including one stopover a few years ago at the Acres USA/ EcoAg Conference at the Lancaster Host Farm Resort. Recently House attended the Pennsylvania Certificated Organic Agricultural Conference in Bird In Hand and travels throughout the area, presenting the idea of growing hemp.

At the exhibit during Friday's informational meeting at Yoder's, the exhibit included hemp products from raw materials, including hurds, silver, bark, stalk, sterilized seed, and tow.

Textile and industrial applications from hemp include fabrics, wood, compressed fiber, rope, cosmetic oil, and clothing. Food on display included hulled hempseed, bread, "Hempzels" (locally baked hemp pretzels), and other treats.

Also, cosmetic products can be made from hemp.

The display includes an educational center explaining the local, state, and national history of hemp and books on healthcare and items denoting the benefits of growing industrial hemp.

Thousands of acres have been devoted to growing hemp regionally, said House. He knows of a Halifax area farmer with 250 acres in hemp, and another in New Providence. But many agribusinesses that support for or consult for hemp growers were expected to attend.

Speaking on behalf of the loosely-knit Pennsylvania Hemp Growers Association, House said that many growers want to be free to grow the products in demand.

"I'm a free-market person," said House. "I'm not interested in having to obtain permits and licenses and all that 'politicalness.'" As part of the presentation, a 20-minute video produced during World War II, "Hemp For Victory," outlined the importance of hemp at one time to the country.

The oldest mill in Pennsylvania dates back to the 1720s.

House noted that William Penn tried to convince German farmers to settle the Conestoga River region for hemp production.

One hemp production town was Hempfield, in Lancaster County.

"The colonials used to make people manufacture hemp," said House.

House touts the agri-environmental benefits of growing hemp, including its natural ability to remove hard metals from the ground. The biomass product can be used for ethanol production.

It can be used to make varnishes and paints.

One item on display at the informational meeting was a car part. Information received from House includes a story of Henry Ford's "biomass car" from the March 1941 issue of Popular Science Magazine, a hemp-fabricated car Ford "grew from the soil."

One of the strongest demands for hemp over the years was for hemp pulp paper rather than tree pulp, to reduce the cutting of trees. An informational sheet noted that one acre of hemp equals 4.1 acres of trees for paper during the same 20-year period.

Pa. Milk Marketing Board Sets First-Ever Floating Premium

sold in Pennsylvania for beverage (federally classified as Class I) purposes.

Board members announced Thursday at a public meeting, in its office in Room 110 of the state Department of Agriculture Building in Harrisburg, that it had deliberated the various recommendations for premium adjustments that were made during by a number of interested parties.

Chairwoman Beverly Minor, member Luke Brubaker, and consumer advocate member J. Robert Derry, who participated in the meeting via speaker telephone announced and then unanimously approved the agency's first-ever sliding over-order premium.

They said they made the order with full confidence that they arrived at the best solution to help the dairy industry, particularly dairy farmers. They said they felt the premium system will provide sufficient aid to help the maintain the continuance of the entire state's dairy industry.

The new type of over-order premium reflects the federally set Basic Formula Price (BFP), and the farmer's cost of production for milk.

The announcement of the premium is called an order, and it was set to be $2.80 per hundredweight (cwt.) of milk produced, processed and sold in Pennsylvania as beverage milk, when the BFP is $10.27; and decrease by a penny with each penny increase in the BFP above $10.27.

The premium is to become effective May 1, and continue until midnight Sept. 30.

The existing PMMB over-order premium of 50-cents per cwt. is to be discontinued when the new order kicks in on May 1.

A BFP decline of $6 per cwt. in February stimulated the action of the PMMB. The BFP had been $16.27 and dropped to $10.27, forcasting a severe decline in producer prices for April milk.

In the meantime, the projected BFP for May has recovered slightly, and, because of the new sliding premium, the effective over-order premium for May is expected to be $1.45 per cwt sold for Class I uses.

According to Dennis Schad, who is a milk marketer for Land O' Lakes and the Middle Atlantic Cooperative Milk Marketing Agency (MACMMA) who also frequently represents several cooperatives including his own at public hearings, the actual level of premium to be received by cooperatives members should be about 20- to 30-percent, because cooperative members share in premium distribution.

(As an aside, Schad noted that cooperative members whose milk is marketed in nearby states won't receive the impact of the Pennsylvania over-order premium until June, because he said it would take that long to negotiate an increase with milk buyers.

Although the PMMB over-order premium doesn't apply to the bulk of the milk sold in Pennsylvania, it has historically demonstrated the effect of influencing the farmer pay in the state and in surrounding states.)

At the $1.45 per cwt. premium level, independent producers are to receive $1.45 for each hundredweight of milk sold that got used for Class I purposes.

The amount of a farmer's milk that gets used for Class I purposes depends upon the milk handler. Accross the state the ratio of premium-eligible milk varies greatly between producers, depending upon to whom the producer sells his milk.

However, many farmers should be able to clearly see for perhaps the first time how much of the premium they are receiving.

As a condition of its Official General Order No. A-901, the official name for the over-order premium adopted, the PMMB has directed that, "Milk dealers shall show a line item on their monthly statements to independent producers and cooperatives the specific amount of the over-order premium being paid."

Since 1988, the PMMB has exercised its authority to set what is called an "over-order" premium.

The "order" part of "over-order" refers to the federally set price set for that farmer for the sale of his milk, according to how it gets used.

Essentially it means it is a bonus over what the federal pricing system would pay that is paid to Pennsylvania farmers who produce milk for local processing and sale.

There are about 10,000 dairy farmers in the state, who produced about 10.9 billion pounds of milk during the 1997-98 fiscal year, according to state statistics.

About 6.6 billion pounds of milk were used in the state during 1997-98, though that number is not considered an accurate reflection of the amount of Pennsylvania-produced milk used within the state.

Pennsylvania is rated fourth in the nation in milk production, behind California, Wisconsin and New York.

Milk flows in and out of the state, depending on the business relationships and contracts between producers, marketers, and commodity manufacturers, processors and retailers.

The way a farmer's milk gets priced is the way it gets used, and the value of it during a month depends on the formula being used by the federal government to set its value.

The value is different for different areas of the nation according to regulatory pricing regions — called Federal Milk Marketing Orders — and the considerations they use in establishing the value of milk.

There are several different federal orders currently existing in Pennsylvania. That is to change Oct. 1 when the US Department of Agriculture's final federal order reform is to take effect and reduce the number of federal orders.

In the meantime, the USDA uses a formula to establish a base price for milk, from which actual farmer pay is futher derived.

The resultant base price is called the Basic Formula Price (BFP) and from it, the value of the different uses of milk for the past month are determined.

The BFP is controversial as a price-establishing mechanism. While it is set to be replaced by another series of calculations that the USDA states better reflects milk value, the BFP is essentially constructed to value milk on the market's perception of potential or real oversupply of milk-derived commodities, such as cheese and butter.

While the demand for fluid milk changes little, the demand for commodities derived from milk components does change. This is because those commodities can be stored for much longer periods, such as months or years, and because surplus drinking milk production can be converted into those commodities. Also, the federal government used to purchase surpluses, and the current system was developed under those conditions.

The situation facing the dairy industry is it has been experiencing business turmoil and wide price swings, as it attempts to transition to open market conditions while still being affected by the federal price regulation system.

The foundation of the industry balancing theory behind the federal government's BFP is that open market demand for dairy derived commodities reflects the value of excess milk production — lower prices paid to farmers curtail milk production, higher prices encourage production.

The entire dairy production industry doesn't necessarily respond in that way, although some producers do.

The over-order premium has been used to help the PMMB with its overall mission of serving consumers by ensuring a viable fluid milk business within state borders, so that communities have access to affordable, locally produced and processed drinking milk.

According to Chairwoman Minor, "(The PMMB premium) is going to push everybody else. It will happen," she said referring to dairy prices paid to farmers in the regional markets, not just the markets in Pennsylvania.

For years, testimony and comparison evidence received by the board has supported that assertion.

"At the same time, we're aware of consumer prices," Minor said.

According to Minor, the one-month steep drop in the BFP resulted in consumers paying from 30 cents to 70 cents less per gallon of milk in one month.

She said that consumers concerned with fairness to dairy farmers may well consider paying a few pennies more to prevent farmers from going out of business.

According to PMMB estimates, if the May BFP remains were it is projected to be, and the over-order premium is $1.45, the consumer price can be expected to be about 12 cents per gallon.

According to Minor, the level of premium was set to reflect concerns for farmers and the industry. If the level is to high, it can serve to attract out-of-state milk and disadvantage instate producers; if it is too low, it doesn't do farmers any good.

"When the farmers gets that low (milk) price, we're adding on that premium," Minor said. "It benefits most dairy farmers, either directly or indirectly."

PMMB Members Look Out For State's Dairy Industry

VERNON ACHENBACH JR.
Lancaster Farming Staff

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — The Pennsylvania Milk Marketing Board (PMMB) is a unique agency in the United States.

As a state agency, it regulates the dairy industry to protect consumers and farmers. Its purpose is to make sure consumers are getting safe, fresh milk at a reasonable price, and that farmers are getting paid properly.

Surrounding states have no such agency, but in recent years several, such as Maryland, began official discussions to consider adopting such an oversight regulatory board.

The Pennsylvania board, itself, is a three-person oversight board of an agency that audits and licenses dairy sales activities within the state with the mission to protect the interests of consumers and milk producers.

The PMMB agency is to ensure that milk handlers are adequately bonded to cover their purchases of milk, and that producers are paid according to how their milk was used and that appropriate premiums are made.

Further, the PMMB has the authority to establish minimum retail and wholesale prices of milk, and establish over-order premiums on the sale of beverage milk produced, processed and sold, all within state boundaries.

The over-order premium applies only to beverage milk, considered a Class I use, under federal definitions.

The purpose for such a premium is to better ensure the financial stability of a complete instate fluid dairy production industry — from farmer to bottler to store to consumer.

Fluid milk is the most perishable of dairy products, and its health benefits as part of a well-balanced diet are well documented.

In times of economic crisis, as was experienced by the nation and Pennsylvanians earlier in the century, readily and locally available fluid milk was shown to serve as a means to prevent widespread starvation and ward off the long-term health affects to individuals and society from inadequate nutrition.

Since 1988, the PMMB has set an over-order premium, ranging from 30 cents to $1.35 per hundred pounds of milk.

For months last year, and into the first couple of months this year, the price of milk paid to all dairy farmers was the highest ever.

Even though future's market projections allowed dairy farmers and industry specialists to anticipate a decline in the price of milk to dairy farmers, the actual drop went well below expectations. The low prices for milk are to be experienced by dairy producers when they receive their milk checks for the month of April.

Overall, milk is valued according to a formula prescribed by the U.S. Department of Agriculture. The resultant value is commonly called the Basic Formula Price (BFP). The formula price accounts for the market values of dairy component products, especially cheese and butterfat, and then sets an overall value for milk.

The value of beverage, or Class I, milk is set by a "Class I differential" which is different for different areas. The differential takes into consideration distances from markets, and other economic considerations.

When the market price of cheese, for example, decreases, the BFP decreases and the price of milk paid to farmers decreases. When the price of cheese increases, the price of milk paid to farmers increases.

Earlier this year, the price of cheese dropped significantly. That decline portended a sharp decline in the price of milk to farmers and stimulated the three members of the PMMB to hold a hearing to consider changes to its over-order premium.

The three members — J. Robert Derry, a consumer advocate; Luke Brubaker, a Lancaster County farmer; and Beverly Minor, who serves as chairwoman — immediately recognized the implications of the BFP decline to the Pennsylvania dairy industry and called for an emergency hearing of the board.

State Sen. Noah Wenger, state Rep. John Barley, and the Pennsylvania Assocation of Milk Dealers joined in the board's call for a hearing.

Providing testimony to the PMMB during the hearing were Pennsylvania Farm Bureau, Pennsylvania State Grange, the Pennsylvania Farmers Union and Farmers Union Milk Producers Association, National Farmers Organization, Dairylea Cooperative Inc., Middle Atlantic Milk Marketing Association, and the staff of the PMMB.

Some of the organization's provided written and oral testimony. Others provided written testimony and chose to not provide oral testimony, but be given the right to cross examine others who served as witnesses.

Ridge Declares Grange Week

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — More than 300,000 Grange members nationwide are to celebrate Grange Week April 18-24.

In recognition of the event, state Gov. Tom Ridge has proclaimed the week Pennsylvania State Grange Week.

"The Grange is steadfast in its mission of improving farming and rural life for all Pennsylvanians. Since its inception in 1873, the Pennsylvania State Grange has remained dedicated to improving farming and rural life for all Pennsylvanians," Ridge said.

"Grange support for agriculture, education, transportation, tax reform, rural development and health care have all reinforced the Grange members' leadership in our communities," he said.

"Grange members have remained committed to the ethic of honest labor and willing service, while helping to sustain the quality of life enjoyed by our rural citizens."

About 300 members of the Pa. State Grange are expected to attend festivities at the Ramada Inn, in downtown Harrisburg, on April 19.

'New' PennAg Industries Poultry Council To Celebrate At Spring Banquet April 20

ANDY ANDREWS
Lancaster Farming Staff
LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — Tuesday evening, April 20, denotes history in the making — the first spring banquet of the PennAg Industries Association Poultry Council as its members enjoy an evening of fun and camaraderie here at the Lancaster Host Resort.

More than 1,000 members, family, and friends of the association, comprising poultry producers and agribusiness associates, will gather for a social at 5:30 p.m. followed by a dinner at 7:15 p.m.

The banquet marks an evening of "fun and frivolity," said Walter N. Peechatka, PennAg Industries Association executive vice president.

Peechatka spoke to more than 100 producers and agri-industry

Disorderly Conduct, with "serious slapstick," will entertain at this year's spring banquet.

Industrial Hemp Growing

The movement away from using hemp for fabrics and textiles was the result of the push to use petroleum-based products after the 1940s.

For processors in the U.S., hemp has been imported for many years from Canada, England, France, and Germany, in addition to China and South America. According to a quote from a preliminary version of the brochure for the informational day, the Kentucky Hemp Growers Co-Op noted, "It is absurd to think the U.S. cannot regulate industrial hemp as it is regulated in Canada, England, France, Germany, and other democratic countries. To claim otherwise is an affront to the intelligence of law enforcement, the American people, and a slap in the face to the integrity of the American farmers." House, a member of the National Hemp Industry Association, with 700 members, noted he has received several calls from farmers who are "looking for leadership," said House. House said that farmers have been interested in this opportunity for years and were grateful for the meeting.

Robert Rex, also speaking at the meeting, is the ag fiber sales specialist with Crane & Company, a paper manufacturer based in Dalton, Mass. For the past 120 years, Rex said, the company has been providing currency paper to the U.S. Treasury.

The company anticipates processing about one million pounds of hemp and another million pounds of kenaf this year. For almost 200 years the company has produced cotton rag.

Rex said that some new paper lines will contain a hemp/kenaf and hemp/cotton blends for commercial papers.

Most of the hemp they receive comes from western Europe. They are working on acquiring Canadian sources of hemp and want to be involved in developing markets in the U.S.

Hemp, which can be a significant rotational crop and does well to suppress Johnsongrass and nematode populations in the soil, can be grown in Pennsylvania. But more industry and educational efforts need to be in place to determine the right types of seed, harvest technologies, and initial processing in the state.

"It's a tough plant to harvest — a real tough plant," said Rex, which requires European-type technologies. Also, to be profitable, hundreds of acres would have to be devoted over several years' time. The crop would be grown similar to corn in this area, harvested once per year.

The stalk dry matter value of hemp equals about $400 per ton. The price paid to growers for its pulp paper value, after some initial processing, would range from 20-35 cents per pound.

For growers in Pennsylvania, a viable market would be hemp grown for food value. The seed, noted Rex, would net a premium for its higher value-added use.

Developing a hemp co-op "would be a great way to go," said Rex, to develop the seed, planting, harvesting, and initial processing technologies to provide hemp for various types of industries.

The meeting also addressed the formation of a possible grower co-op in the state. Also scheduled to speak was Jane Balmer, Pennsylvania Farm Bureau representative and farmer. Balmer was set to give a talk about the possibilities of an alternative crop such as hemp.

sleep. In fact, said Troutman, when it rains, the soil stays intact.

He remembers when the rains would come, the creek would overflow, sending water in flood over the road. There would be evidence of significant erosion, with soil over top of the road.

But ever since the terraces and waterways and pipelines were installed, there haven't been any floods. There are no signs of erosion.

The Troutmans — including Ralph, Ralph's son Franklin, and Franklin's son, Luke — were recognized recently with the 1998 Outstanding Conservation Farmer Award from the Berks County Conservation District.

Franklin's parents, Ralph and Mabel, began working on the farm in 1950 and purchased the farm in 1969. The same year, Franklin, who was in partnership with his father from 1982-1992 and purchased the farm in 1996, said he woke up to "two barn fires out of the bedroom window."

A neighbor's barn burned down twice, once by lightning on a Sunday evening. The second time woke Troutman up, late at night.

The other time he was woken up was from a fire that consumed the Retland's Farm old Swiss bank barn, on a Saturday before Mother's Day, Franklin recalled.

At the Troutman farm, a low Gothic-style barn with recently installed florescent lighting was built.

The Troutmans operate two farms, and own the home farm near Womelsdorf. He rents land on three other farms and tills about 290 acres. According to the district, the home farm is comprises 84.8 acres in Marion Township.

The farm name, Retland, comes from the prefix, RET, initials for Ralph Elias Troutman.

For the most part, the Troutmans use minimum till on the limestone soil. Because of the type of soil on the owned and rented ground, they do little no-till.

The Troutmans grow 180 acres of corn, 50 of alfalfa, 50 of soybeans, 15 in wheat, and several acres in permanent grass, from which they harvest and place in big square bales, some of which is wrapped.

The crop rotation is corn for two years followed by one year of soybeans, another year of corn, and 4-5 years of alfalfa.

"We're blessed with good limestone ground," said Franklin.

Other farms include a lot of rocks.

Troutman has the soil tested regularly by a commercial crop adviser.

Despite a droughty year last season, "it was not dry here," he said. "We had a good growing season. We harvested all but 70 bushels of beans." Last year, he said, was a "real good year for growing everything." Retland Farm includes 55 milking cows with the same numbers of replacements, all Holstein, mostly registered. On state DHIA, the Troutmans milk about 24,500 pounds on the herd average per year.

Troutman also manages 90 steers. In addition, Troutman has help from three part-time: Galen Hoover, Kyle Zerbe, and Matthew Manbeck.

Luke Troutman, Franklin's son, is using the experience of protecting farmland soil with his work as a member of the Tulpehocken FFA.

The farm was named a Dairy of Distinction in the late 1980s, noted Franklin. The family ships milk to Clover Farms.

According to the district, Franklin believes in conservation and has installed the following best management practices on the farm: 200 feet of grassed waterways, 235 feet of stone-centered waterways, 3,000 feet of terraces, 4,340 feet of storage terraces, and 2,100 feet of outlet piping. He also strip-crops 75.8 acres on his farm.

Franklin, a county committee member of the USDA Berks County Farm Service Agency, has improved his best management practices through the use of grass and legumes in his rotation. He has implemented improved pasture and hayland management systems.

When his father joined the conservation district, one of the first steps taken to conserve soil was the installed of contour strips. Some tiling was also completed to ensure soil wasn't lost from the hilly fields. Now, with the recent installation of waterways and piping systems, the water is released to a tributary of the Tulpehocken River.

A manure storage area, with a concrete floor and earthen bank, was installed in the early 1980s. On the agenda, noted Franklin, is the installation of a all-sided concrete in the storage area. Manure storage is 100,000 gallons which is emptied and spread twice a year.

Troutman is careful to spread in the fall and the spring and to disc the material into the soil as quickly as possible, "so we don't lose nutrients," he noted. They follow an approved nutrient management plan.

Also, the Fish and Game Commission, to protect the Tulpehocken Watershed, are scheduled to install stream bank fencing this year on the farm.

Franklin hauls livestock every Wednesday for the neighbors to the Leesport Farmers Market.

In 1996, Troutman preserved the home farm.

"I hope I can live up to the expectations of the award and keep on striving to preserve soil as best we can with the knowledge we have," said Troutman.

Luke, Franklin's son, is using the experience of protecting farmland soil with his work as a member of the Tulpehocken FFA.

Franklin Troutman learned by following the work of area farmers, who were recognized in years past for their conservation efforts.

He pointed to the work of neighbors, Martin and Missy Moyer, who were honored by the district a few years. From their experience, Troutman said he was able to develop some ideas for use on his own farm.

Franklin, Luke, and Ralph Troutman grow 180 acres of corn, 50 of alfalfa, 50 of soybeans, 15 in wheat, and several acres in permanent grass, from which they harvest and place in big square bales, some of which is wrapped.

PABA Adopts Bylaws, Elects Officers

YORK (York Co.) — The Pennsylvania Ayrshire Breeders Association adopted its first set of official bylaws during the association's annual spring convention, at the Holidome Convention Center in York.

The organization is now officially called the Pennsylvania Ayrshire Breeders Association, but it includes the additional states of New Jersey and West Virginia.

That's just one part of the PABA's bylaws.

The organization's self-governing rules are organized into 11 different topic sections — organizational name, objective, membership, officers, annual meetings, elections, business, amendments, business meeting, rights of members and the organization, and the order of business to follow at meetings.

In other action, PABA inducted Tom Whittaker into its Hall of Fame.

According to a news release, Whittaker was born and raised in Tioga County before attending Penn State University.

He has been involved in the founding of several 4-H clubs around the state, worked with National Ayrshire Association in Brandon, Vermont, and then initiated an auctioneering business to promote and sell Ayrshires.

The induction was made following the convention buffet dinner, during the two-day event that was organized by the Pomraning family — Myron, Teresa and their two daughters.

In an election of officers and board members, Ben Hillyard was made president, Bonnie Wentworth vice president, Kathy Hillyard secretary, and Marie String treasurer.

PABA's 1999 board members are Alvin String, Dwight Hunter, Amy Wolfgang, Dale Maulfair, Don Gable, Earl Keefer, Harold Kulp, Dean Varner and Debbie Young.

Samantha Hillyard and Sharon Nolan are Youth Committee chairpersons.

Also during the annual event, Taletha Coolbaugh of Canton, was named state Ayrshire princess. She was crowned by outgoing state Ayrshire Princess Susan Richardson.

Selected as the first alternate Ayrshire princess was Melissa Burdick from Potter County.

Hannah Wentworth of Lancaster and Marlisa Coolbaugh of Canton were both named as state Ayrshire maids.

Production awards were distributed by the new Ayrshire royalty.

The Pa. Ayrshire Breeders also conducted a fun auction to help raise funds to help sponsor youth activities during the year. Various items were donated, including a handpainted saw decorated with an Ayrshire. It sold to the Dean Varner family.

In other business, it was announced that the annual Pa. Ayrshire Breeders picnic is to be held August 21 in Belleville at John Roger's Plum Bottom Farm, in conjunction with his Raised to Graze sale.

There were five calves offered during the Absolutely Ayrshire convention sale with a December calf consigned by Wentworth Farm selling for $1,300 to Amber-Knoll Farm. The sale average was $671.

Gouglersville Grange To Donate $2,000 To Burn Center

GOUGLERSVILLE (Berks Co.) — During a 7:30 p.m., April 20 community night event at the Gouglersville Grange No. 1743, the organization is set to present a $2,000 donation to the Lehigh Valley Burn Center.

It represents the largest single contribution effort by the Grange, according to its treasurer Henry Bohn.

About a year or more ago, one of the Gouglersville Grange members was badly burned during an accident while preparing chicken for the organization's annual chicken noodle soup sales.

The Gouglersville Grange annually makes gallons and gallons of homemade chicken noodle soup, and then sells it at the Reading and Kutztown fairs as a main fundraising activity. Generally about 25 people volunteer to be involved in the entire chicken-noodle soup fund raising effort.

While preparing chicken, Grange member Donald Balthaser was hurt and taken to the Lehigh Valley Burn Center. Balthaser is almost completely recovered from the accident, according to Bohn.

The health care work and professionalism of the workers at the Burn Center impressed the Grange members so that they decided to organize a fundraising event to help support the center.

Last fall, the Gouglersville Grange, with just under 100 members, held a successful Longaberger Basket Bingo event to raise money for the Burn Center.

Additional donations were added to that amount and Tuesday night representatives from the Burn Center are to receive a check for $2,000.

The Burn Center representatives are also to give a presentation as part of the evening festivities, which includes door prizes.

According to Bohn, "We have never done anything this big; $2,000. We have done other things," he said, such as raising funds to purchase training equipment for the local fire company.

"This is the biggest, money wise. We thought they (Burn Center employees) did such an excellent job, we wanted to repay them."

For more information on the event, or the Gouglersville Grange, contact Larry Eshleman, master, at 1893 Old Lancaster Pike, Sinking Spring, PA 19608.

PennAg Industries Poultry Council representatives earlier this month at the Pennsylvania Poultry Sales and Service Conference at the Holiday Inn, Grantville.

A couple of weeks ago, the banquet was sold out, with more than 1,000 expected to attend, according to Jim Shirk, assistant vice president of PennAg Industries, who directs the Poultry Council.

Shirk noted that poultry industry representatives from 26 different states and from three Canadian provinces will attend the banquet.

Despite the banquet being sold out, according to Peechatka, a waiting list has been established to accommodate those who still want to attend, if seats become available. Call the association at (717) 733-2238. Tickets are $100 each to support the association fundraiser.

At the banquet, two comedy acts are scheduled. One is Disorderly Conduct, "serious slapstick" with an explosion of visual gags, circus acts, physical comedy, and other adventures.

According to the playbill, the "husband and wife team proceeds thorough a series of adventures and misadventures that will bring you out of your seats and occasionally on stage." Another is Frankie Pace. Using a variety of small props in concert with a unique stand-up style, the "comedian extraordinaire" will cause you to exit laughing.

Peechatka, PennAg executive vice president, spoke about some of the new and old elements of the association at the poultry sales conference early this month.

"PennAg is the oldest agribusiness trade association in the U.S.," he said. The association originated in 1878, which came to be known as the Pennsylvania State Association of Millers. In 1931, the name was changed to the Pennsylvania Millers and Feed Dealers Association. In 1971, the association was named what it is today — the PennAg Industries Association.

While the old PennAg Industries stood as a feed industry lobbying group, it has merged with the Pennsylvania Poultry Federation. As a result, the federation now operates as an arm of the association — the Poultry Council.

The one major agribusiness association represents all of the industry sectors and the integration of the agribusiness community. Independent councils operate under the PennAg umbrella, said Peechatka.

In 1997, the Pennsylvania Agronomic Products Association, representing pesticide and fertilizer dealers in the state, was brought into the PennAg Industries fold as a council.

In 1998, the Pennsylvania Poultry Federation merged with PennAg, and it too became a council.

The two mergers provide a better and more efficient use of dues dollars and a more united association, Peechatka noted.

PennAg now includes the Poultry, Agronomic Products, and Feed and Grain councils.

Sometime this year, the association will meet to authorize the appointment of a Pork Council, which will represent additional membership opportunities for swine producers and agribusiness in PennAg, noted Peechatka.

The different councils can lobby for member directives with more unity. They can respond to the "increasing strength of the agribusiness community," he said.

"The poultry industry now has a strong voice and a unified one with the council concept," he told those at the conference.

The original structure and intent of the association, however, stays the same. The councils are "managed by those who pay the dues," he said, including 700 business members.

"A lot of the old remains the same," said Peechatka. "We hope to retain the strength of the old in the new organizational structure." At the same time, he noted, "you achieve efficiency when you consolidate."

Peechatka noted that, looking through his "crystal ball," he notes that PennAg, if it is successful, has the potential to be the "premier organization representing agribusiness in the state."

That includes leadership in the state's General Assembly and Executive branches, a place that state representatives or senators can seek advice about issues in agribusiness, and a "household name at the capitol," he said.

They can keep the political action committees "well funded" to support those in decision-making positions "who view issues the same way we do." The political impact, he said, is not limited to Harrisburg, but can effect the national scene as well.

The association will continue to work to be "an effective force in the months and years ahead," he said.

Capital Area Beekeepers Plan Short Course

DAUPHIN (Dauphin Co.) — Have you ever thought about becoming a beekeeper? Do you know how important honey bees are to agriculture?

More than one-third of our daily diet of vegetables, fruit, milk, and meat is either directly or indirectly attributed to honey bee pollination.

Would you like to be a part of agriculture and enjoy harvesting your own honey?

The Capitol Area Beekeepers Association is offering its 12th annual Short Course In Basic Beekeeping, a 2-day short course scheduled May 8 from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. At the Dauphin County Agriculture and Natural Resources Center in Dauphin, and on May 15 from noon to 5 p.m. at the Milton Hershey Farm Conference Center and Apiary in Hershey. This course is sponsored by the association in cooperation with the Penn State Cooperative Extension.

The course faculty includes cooperative extension apiculturist Maryann Frazier; Chief State Apiary Inspector Jim Steinhauer; Penn State honey bee researcher Jennifer Finley; Regional Apiary Inspector Tracy Helton; and several experienced and qualified members of the association. Each registered attendee will receive a packet of beginning beekeeping information as well as other course-related handouts.

Hiving a package of bees and the opportunity to get hands-on experience in an operating apiary will be two of several highlights of the course. Topics will include "Bee-ology"; diseases, parasites, and pests; equipment; hive manageament; harvesting and marketing; byproducts of the hive; apiary location and setup; colony inspection; and colony observation.

Table displays of beekeeping equipment, books and periodicals, and other beekeeping topics will be offered. A random drawing will award the hived package of bees and hive to a lucky beginning beekeeper. Refreshment breaks will feature homemade foods made with honey.

The course is planned, organized, and presented by the members of the association to strengthen the association's mission of fostering and preserving the science and art of beekeeping. This course will assist new beekeepers in getting started, as well as provide the latest information to current beekeepers. Many experienced beekeepers will be in attendance to assist in responding to questions and concerns. A certificate of completion will be awarded to each new beekeeper completing the course.

Preregistration is requested before May 5. The course fee is $25 per person. Participants are encouraged to bring a bee veil and protective suit, if possible. A brown bag lunch is suggested, although fast-food restaurants are located nearby.

For a registration form, location maps, and lodging information, contact Maria Contino, secretary, 6087 Rockland Drive, Harrisburg, PA 17112, (717) 657-3932.

Quilters Piece Together Ingenious Works Of Art

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — More than 500 quilts showcased at the Quilter's Heritage Celebration pieced together amazing artistic works of art.

"Awe" best describes the census of the more than 20,000 people who attended the four-day event at the Lancaster Host Resort.

The quilts selected for the juried competition are not the usual patterns associated with the art. Instead, one-of-a-kind original patterns combined with unusual techniques and materials provide a stunning display. Multitalented quilters show ingenious approaches with entries that incorporate such techniques at collage, pictorial and abstract designs, and harmonizing color flow.

The only characteristics the quilts have in common is meticulous quilting on a predominately fiber background.

For the 12th year, Rita B. Barber curated the annual show. This year's theme exhibit featured quilts and other artifacts based on the nine-patch block. After centuries of quilt making, it is astounding that seamstresses continue to think of fresh approaches to demonstrate the nine-patch block.

The show is much more than a display of quilts from 47 states, Canada, and countries around the world. Workshops offer participants a chance to try sewing machines that ease piecing and feature machine quilting stitches. Participants are taught how to use fusible web, create illusion of curves, mixing paint, fabric, and stitching, and the drafting of quilt patterns.

A Country Journal by Maggie Walker, Elverson, received first place in the team/group entry. Maggie designed and pieced the quilt, which is her interpretation of a vision she had when she found an old agricultural magazine with notations about crops, weather, supplies, and farm aniamls. The exotic chickens are machine pieced, hand appliqued by Leslie Hickland and Janet Inscoe, and quilted by Theresa Fusco.

A Walk In The Mountains by author Linda Jenkins, Colorado, uses exuberant color and methods featured in her book "The Applique Handbook," which describes methods of applique to get things done faster.

Harmony by Cheryl Kerestes, Wyoming, is an adaptation of a 19th century quilt.

Thread by Thread

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — Quilts and Lancaster County have long been synonymous. But the year 2000 will bring some uncommon threads to the quilting world.

A millenium celebration called "Thread By Thread: City of Quilts" is being planned by the city's cultural groups.

Not all the quilts featured will be made with thread and fabric. Instead, artists will use music, acting, photography, printmaking, painting, woodmaking and other media to portray quilts through the centuries.

Six cultural organizations plan the following events:

- Fulton Opera House plans a beautifully moving musical that celebrates the specialness and resilence of the country's pioneer women.

Deidre Simmons, executive

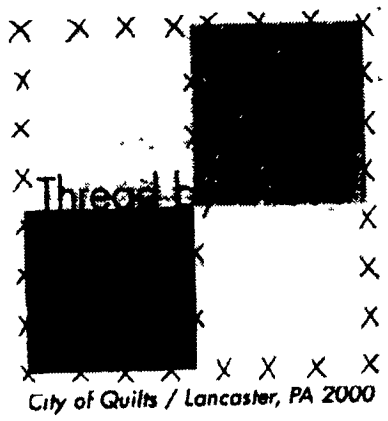
director of Fulton Opera House, said the play will weave threads of one family's legacy quilt with music as funny, bold, and tender as the mothers and daughters it defines.

"It is a patchwork of strength, perseverance, determination, and love," Simmons said of the musical that will open April 27, 2000 and run through May 7.

Tickets, from $12 to $29, will be on sale at the box office. Call (717) 397-7425.



• Heritage Center Museum of Lancaster County will be the site of an exhibition called "The Stars of Pennsylvania: Lancaster County Quilts." Almost all the historic quilts to be featured in the exhibition will be from private collections.

Peter Seibert, executive director of the Heritage Center, said, "From the broad stripes of Amish quilts to the intricate piecing of Mennonite and other work, the rich and endless variety of county quilts have captured the interest of collectors, writers, quilts, and the curious.

Accompanying the exhibition will be a publication of the same title written by local textile scholar Dr. Patricia T. Herr. The publication will feature 200-300 quilts. A day long symposium relating to the history and creation of quilts is being planned.

Heritage Center Museum is open April through December, Tuesdays through Saturdays, from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Admission is free.

Seibert said a county-wide student contest will also be held in conjunction with the Heritage Center display. Three students will be given savings bonds for their award-winning original quilt pattern accompanied by a brief description of the quilting design.

• Lancaster Galleries, 34 N. Water St., will conduct an exhibition on quilt patterns used in art through the centuries. Mike Heberlein, owner of Lancaster Galleries, said the patterns will range from primitive old drawings to contemporary realistic wood carvings of quilts by Fraser Smith. The exhibition is free and open to the public during the month of April 2000.

• Lancaster Museum of Art will feature contemporary quilts by national artists in an exhibition scheduled from April 14-May 29, 2000. Cindi Morrison, director of the Museum of Art, said uncommon threads or unusual materials will be used in a variety of ways to create contemporary quilts.

An artists' discussion is also slated for Saturday April 29, 2000, from noon to 1 p.m.

• Lancaster Symphony Orchestra will create a musical quilt representing a patchwork of musical styles. Kristie Davis, executive director of the Orchestra, said "Performances will feature three distinctively different styles of music, quilted together into one program, to form a Musical Quilt, scheduled April 8-9, 2000.

Subscriptions to the Symphony's Millenium Season as well as single tickets for this performance are available by calling the Symphony's subscription manager at (717) 291-4420.

• Pennsylvania School of Art and Design (PSA&D) is planning for nationally-known quilt makers to bring a mixed-media approach during an exhibit that will incorporate photography, printmaking, painting, and other constructed objects.

Mary Colleen Heil, president of the school, said that crossover quilts will be on exhibit from January through March 2000 at PSA&D's main galleries, 204 N. Prince St. Admission is free.

Mary Stadden, director of public relations for PSA&D, said, "Project partners believe that heritage, the arts, and culture are the core of a city such as Lancaster. Planned activities are expected to draw thousands of countians and tourists. More information will be released closer to the year 2000 celebration."

CLEANING PRODUCTS FROM THE KITCHEN

Are you interested in effective, convenient, inexpensive cleaning products? Your kitchen cupboards have several ingredients that are great to use when cleaning, plus they are kind to the environment.

Vinegar

Vinegar has a mild acidic nature that solves many irksome problems. For example, to brighten aluminum pots that have discolored from foods and water, fill them with water, add ¼ cup vingegar, and boil for 20 minutes. Pour the liquid out, wash and dry the pot.

Boiling the same solutions of water and vinegar in the teakettle can clean it of sediment.

To clean and polish brass and copper, mix two tablespoons of salt into one cup of vinegar. Add just enough flour to make a paste. Dip a damp cloth into the paste, and rub the brass or copper until the stains disappear. Rinse with cold water and dry.

Put one part vinegar and one part water in a spray bottle, and squirt on upholstered furniture to remove odors, such as cigarette smoke and mildew. It may take several applications to completely remove odors. (Pre-test fabric for color stability.)

Use the same solution (one part vinegar and one part water) to spray on windows as a window cleaner. Wipe with a clean cloth. If unusual streaking occurs during the first application, it might be due to the wax that some chemical glass cleaners contain. Remove the wax with a small amount of rubbing alcohol, and clean with the above solution.

Baking Soda

Because of baking soda's mild alkaline nature, it is safe to use on items that stronger chemicals might discolor or otherwise harm. Do not, however, use baking soda on aluminum products — it may result in a dark, difficult-to remove stain.

Mix three tablespoons of baking soda with one quart of water, and use it to clean small appliances. "Try it on a dampened surface for more difficult stains.)

Use baking soda to freshen non-aluminum coffee makers.

Clean the inside of thermos bottles and refrigerators.

Leave an opened box of baking soda in the refrigerator to trap odors.

Use baking soda to clean chrome without scratching.

Remove odors from a diaper pail. (Fill the pail with water, add soda, and let stand.)

Baking soda can be used as a carpet deodorizer. Sprinkle it on the carpet, wait at least 15 minutes, and vacuum.

Use one part baking soda to two parts kitty litter in the litter box.

Sprinkle baking soda in the sink, and use it as a cleanser.

Remove soap scum in the shower without damaging the surface of new showers and tubs.

Use a dry paste to remove grease, pine pitch, and odor from hands.

Ida's Notebook

Ida Risser

The middle of April and already the flower beds have weeds in them. Our daughter and her family visited here for several days and helped a bit. She was kept busy watching her 4-year-old and 15-month-old sons. You see, I keep too many small things sitting around on tables and they tempt children. Despite moving things, there were a few casualties.

The other week I was surprised when one of my sisters offered to cane a chair seat for me. I told her that I had none; only to find one later in the attic. She has just returned it, and it looks very nice. Maybe we'll refinish it sometime. A number of years ago I refinished a bureau, a highchair, a rocker and a hanging mirror. So, I know how much work it is to do a good job on furniture. I started on a corner cupboard, but one of my sons told me that I was ruining the antique piece. It had been painted a muddy brown and I was tired of looking at it

The men have bulldozed a number of trees along a fence row. They tell me that now corn will grow better without shade Me, I always hate to see them destroy trees even if they're not in a woodlot. Long ago, my father cut down a number of large trees along a road because they were covered with bittersweet vines. He was disgusted as people stole the berries, which he could have sold at a Lancaster market. So, no one had any Someone must read my notes, as recently someone inquired as to how I grow peanuts while another wanted to know where I get paw paw trees. I have even been asked where to buy a certain book that I mentioned in an article.

On Being a Farm Wife (and other hazards)

Joyce Bupp

The grass has turned a deep, vibrant green.

Daffodils gaily nod their cheery heads in the breeze Forsythia bushes glow golden in the sunshine

Giddy with the joy and promise of Springtime, we gladly dig holes in our pocketbooks. Fertilize our gardens with liberal spreading of bucks And bask in the daydreams of color-coordinated annual borders, picture-perfect perennials, and baskets overflowing with mounds of dewy, homegrown vegetables

"Grow it. Pick it. Eat it!" proclaimed a gardening ad that cracked me up as I thumbed through a publication while enjoying my early morning breakfast bagel with cream cheese.

Yeah. Right. Just like that. Oh, golly, gee whiz, if it were only that simple.

Because the advertisement had to do with planting fruit trees.

Years ago, when we first moved onto the farm, there were a couple of old apple trees scattered around the farmstead Age, building, re-landscaping, even a fire in one started by an electric fence, which slipped off the insulator, took their toll over the years

Grow it Pick it. Eat it

A fruit tree is a commitment Just ask your local professional orchardist Every plant problem in the book with an inclination toward fruit will know in a moment just the right moment your pet tree is susceptible to bugs, blights, blisters, fungi and assorted infestations.

"Do you really want to fiddle with having to spray and prune and fend off frost," queried The Farmer years ago when we first tossed the fruit tree idea around "When we have orchards a mile up the road?"

He reiterated the idea again last year, when I lamented the demise of my strawberry patch and mused about replanting more And, he's right With cows to help milk every day, bawling baby calves, and a computer relentless flashing an impatient cursor to "get with it!" our strawberries this year will be U-pick. Or, he suggests, pre-picked.

Then there are the blueberry bushes. I've planted at least a dozen over the years. Some large potted ones. Some small mail-order slips. Some my mom even got for me. We do have one blueberry bush of a few feet high to show for the effort. Despite all gardening admonitions that blueberries need to be grown in pairs, to this bush's credit, it does bear some fruit in its state of singular bliss. The backyard mockingbirds generally find the berries before I do

Fruit cultivation is a commitment; I obviously don't have that commitment. Nor do I particularly relish gnarled, wormy apples or frozen peach tree blossoms or tending to a pear tree which may or may not choose to yield

I have grown soft and dependent on the efforts of our good neighbors who as professionals do this so efficiently.

Last mid-summer, The Farmer came home from one of his parts-and-repairs-stockup-trips to town with trees in the back of the pickup Apple trees

"You bought WHAT?" I exclaimed

Hey, the apple trees had been reduced on sale to 90% off the original price, for goodness sake (Yes, they were still alive) And, shortly before, our West Coast daughter has been reminiscing on the phone one night about how she used to love picking apples off those old trees when she was a kid And how it would be nice for her kids to be able to do that on visits to the farm.

We now have a couple of "yearling" apple trees happily thriving in the meadow fence now

"The deer will enjoy them," justified The Farmer of his fruit tree planting, after years of reasoning why planting fruit trees made no economic sense Since deer are still a rare pleasure to watch on our farm, it's an acceptable excuse

And, if our "little dears" enjoy them too, why that's just an added bonus.

Around here, when it comes to grandkids and animals, economics and logic go out the window

Asparagus: Elegant Springtime Vegetable

A good source of Vitamin C and folic acid, asparagus has no fat, cholesterol or sodium.

When selecting asparagus, look for bright green stalks with closed, compact, firm tips. If the tips are slightly wilted, freshen them up by soaking in cold water. At home, keep asparagus moist and cool until using. Loosely wrap it in the refrigerator bin.

Asparagus is simple and quick to cook by a variety of methods. Most cooks prefer it crisp-tender but adjust the cooking time if you like it more tender.

• To boil, place whole spears or pieces of asparagas in a skillet of boiling water. Cook uncovered 3 to 5 minutes or until crisp-tender.

• To microwave, place one pound asparagas spears or pieces in a shallow microwave-safe dish with tips toward the center. Microwave on High 6 to 9 minutes for whole spears and 5 to 7 minutes for pieces. Stir or rearrange halfway through cooking.

• To stir-fry, cut asparagus spears into approximately 2-inch pieces and cook in hot oil or butter over medium-high heat until crisp-tender, stirring constantly, about 3 to 5 minutes.

• To steam, tie bundles of asparagus together and place in steamer with enough water to cover lower half of spears. Cover steamer; cook until crisp-tender, about 5 to 7 minutes.

Here are some recipes to create unique, flavorful dishes using asparagus. Enjoy!

PERFECT ASPARAGUS

12-ounces fresh asparagus spears
1 to 2 tablespoons butter
2 to 3 teaspoons fresh lemon juice
2 to 3 teaspoons finely chopped fresh chives, parsley, or chervil (optional)
Salt and pepper

Trim or break asparagus at the tender point; rinse. Place asparagus in large skillet with boiling water to cover; simmer, uncovered, 3 to 5 minutes or until crisp-tender. Drain well.

Meanwhile melt butter with lemon juice in small saucepan; stir in herbs, if desired. Spoon over asparagus. Season with salt and pepper, as desired. Makes 4 servings.

SPRINGTIME QUICHE

4 eggs, slightly beaten
¼ teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon pepper

Heat oven to 400 degrees. In medium bowl, combine flour and salt; cut in butter until crumbly. Stir in chives and water (mixture will be crumbly). Shape into ball.

On lightly floured surface, roll dough into 12-inch circle, ⅛ -inch thick. Fold into quarters; unfold and ease into 10-inch quiche pan, pressing firmly against bottom and sides. Crimp or flute crust.

Spread cheese over bottom of crust; top with chicken. Sprinkle bacon over chicken. Place asparagus spears in spoke pattern on top of bacon.

In small bowl stir together all remaining filling ingredients. Pour over chicken mixture. Bake for 40 to 45 minutes or until golden and set in center. Let stand 10 minutes.

When it comes to asparagus, the thicker the better. That's the verdict that vegetable expert in Penn State's College of Agricultural Science said.

"In supermarkets, shoppers see thin spears of asparagus bunched and marketed as 'tender gourmet' style," said Peter Ferretti, professor of vegetable crops. "In reality, spears that are larger than a half-inch in diameter are more tender and higher in soluble fiber and vitamins than the thinner spears."

A good source of Vitamin C and folic acid, asparagus has no fat, cholesterol or sodium.

Asparagus should either be prepared immediately or stored in refrigerator. The longer you let asparagus sit, the tougher it gets. Asparagus loses moisture very quickly, the sugars within the spear begin to turn to starch, and the spear develops woody tissue if left at room temperature. In thinner asparagus spears, this happens even faster.

Here's a recipe from the Washington Asparagus Commission. For more, send a self-addressed, stamped envelope to the Commission, c/o Publicis, 190 Queen Anne Ave. N., Seattle WA 98109.

Sprinkle each with 2 tablespoons cheese adn 1½ teaspoons each parsley and shallots; sprinkle with seasoned salt and pepper. Roll up turkey to enclose asparagus. Fasten with skewers or toothpicks. Brown turkey rolls in oil in oven-proof skillet; pour wine over and sprinkle with seasoned salt and pepper. Bake at 350 degrees for 15 to 20 minutes or until turkey is cooked but not dry. Tomato Catsup

3½ cups tomato sauce
¼ teaspoon celery seed
4 tablespoons plus 2 teaspoons sugar
1¾ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon onion powder
Scant ⅛ teaspoon pepper
Dash cayenne pepper
4 tablespoons plus 2 teaspoons light corn syrup
4 tablespoons plus 2 teaspoons white distilled vinegar
2 tablespoons plus 1 teaspoon fresh lemon juice

To keep catsup from separating, put one cup sauce at a time into a blender and whirl at highest speed for one full minute. Pour into a heavy, high-sided, non-aluminum pan. If using a food processor, blend all sauce at once; stopping to scrape down sides once or twice. In a mortar and pestle, crush celery seed into a powder. If you don't have a mortar and pestle, combine celery seed, sugar, and salt in a clean, dry blender or processor container and whirl until powdered. Mix powdered celery seed, sugar, salt, onion powder, and peppers into pan of blended sauce. Gently boil, uncovered, for about 25-30 minutes, stirring frequently. Remove from heat when able to make loose mounds. It should be just a bit thicker than you want your finished catsup to be. Cool sauce quickly by immersing the pot in a sink of cold water while stirring the contents. When sauce is cool, stir in the corn syrup, vinegar, and lemon juice until blended. Pour into clean jars or bottles. Store refrigerated 4-6 months.

Thanks to Ann Chapman, Ulster, for sending this recipe.

Ladd Williams, conservation planner for The Nature Conservancy, Pennsylvania Chapter, stands in front of Ft. Indiantown Gap Military Base and discusses the plight of the regal fritillary, a rare butterfly found in an area of the base. The butterfly, once much more prevalent in the East is now only located on the base.

Butterflies, Helicopters Share Military Base

JINNY WILT
Adams County
Correspondent

ANNVILLE (Lebanon Co.) — What do the military's sleek Blackhawk Helicopter and an elegant and delicate rare regal fritillary have in common?

You'll find the answer if you go to the Fort Indiantown Gap Military Base where the two can be found sharing the same airspace.

Another commonality between the unlikely duo is their need for care — the Blackhawk needs its pilot and crew and the endangered butterfly needs people like Ladd Williams.

As the helicopters fly overhead, Williams, conservation planner for The Nature Conservancy, Pennsylvania Chapter, contracted with the Pennsylvania National Guard to prepare a basewide environmental impact statement, talks about the butterfly and efforts to save it from extinction in the East It is still found in the Midwest, but declining there too

Currently it is rated a three globally, which means "it is very rare and local throughout its range," and in the Commonwealth it is rated a one which means, "it is critically impaired "

It's range was once from Manitoba to East Montana east to South Ontario and Maine, south to East Colorado, North Arkansas, and west to North Carolina, according to The Audubon Society's "Field Guide to North American Butterflies "

Ironically, Williams, who has a bachelor's degree from the University of West Virginia in wildlife biology, and a master's degree in human dimensions/ wildlife management, said it is thought that the beautiful, large orange and black butterfly lives on the base because of the activities of the military.

While he warns that he butterfly is "close to the edge" at "The Gap," the military apparently provides just the right "amount of disturbance to these fields to create the vegetation composition" that the butterfly needs.

It feeds on butterfly milkweed, thistle, dogbane, mountain mint and knapweed, he said, with milkweed its' favorite.

The Guard's land management practices of mowing and burning, which were developed to insure fire safety on the bombing range, have had the unintentional benefit of maintaining habitat for the regal.

Burning the fields, something the military does, also is one of the activities that generates new vegetation, Williams said. An ecologist who starts work in a few weeks will try to determine how often and when this burning is needed. For example, Williams said, if the disturbances to the fields does not take place the area reverts to forest and the butterfly leaves. "It needs an open grassy area to survive," he said.

The ecologist will also try to determine how close to the nectar plants the host plants should be. "These are critical questions for the regal's survival," Williams said.

The butterfly's host plant is either an arrow/leaved or ovate/leaved violet, both herbaceous perennials, he said.

The first male regals emerge from their chrysalis at "the Gap" in mid-June. Males patrol their habitat in search of freshly emerged females, while the females rest in the grasses or bask in the sun The males die off late in the season and the females enter diapause (a resting stage) during the month of August. After this period of rest and relaxation, the females will re-emerge to lay eggs and die.

The eggs will then hatch in three to four weeks and the miniscule first instar larvae will seek shelter near the ground's surface and immediately enter diapause without feeding. As temperatures rise the following spring the larvae will begin to feed on the host violets.

Feeding only at night, the larvae will molt five times before forming a chrysalis in late May or early June. After 17 days a new generation of adults will emerge to perpetuate their brief life cycle.

"The butterfly is an indicator of things that go wrong in an environment. They are sensitive to habitat fragmentation. They're not like the white tail deer where if you build a development they'll still come into your yard. If you take away the plants that these insects need to survive they're gone and that's what happened in Southcentral Pennsylvania to the regal fritillary," Williams said

Weather is a factor too with wet and warm winters thought to be the most detrimental to the regal larvae because of the molds. Of course extremely cold weather kills them too.

The regal is visible in a corridor between Blue Mountain and Second Mountain where the military trains, Williams said, and it is also thought to be in a restricted section of the base so he estimates that it lives on 500 acres.

Thought to have "winked out," a "butterfly person" spotted a regal fritillary in the early 1990s. TNC then began to quietly monitor it and finally decided this was a good opportunity to work with the federal government.

The North American Butterfly Association also sued the Pennsylvania National Guard and the courts mandated the environmental impact statement. Williams, who is responsible for the biological components of that document will coordinate the fieldwork of five subcontractors throughout this summer, fall and winter.

TNC says, "Loss of habitat, pesticide use, and possibly a viral pathogen have had a devastating effect on this sensitive insect. Declining throughout its range, the regal has suffered most alarmingly in the east Due to more recent changes in land use practices (i.e. intensive cropping, feed lots, development and reforestation), the regals preferred habitat pasture/hayfield ecotype – is now almost gone In the past 20 years the regal fritillary has virtually disappeared in the east, reduced to a single population in Southcentral Pennsylvania."

Volunteers who would like to help monitor the butterfly's activities are welcome to call Williams at his base office at (717) 861-2449.

Food, Faith, Farming Initiative Begins Reconnection Between Consumer, Producer

DAVID HIEBERT
Westmoreland Co.
Correspondent

LITITZ (Lancaster Co.) — Food, Faith, Farming Initiative recently began what organizers hope will be a new connection between the creator and created, people who produce food and those who eat it.

Joel Satalin, Swoope, Va., gave his point of view on how farmers need to control their cost "The hardest thing for any of us to do is to get control. The easiest thing is to run down and buy the latest genetics, the newest gadget, or a bag," he cautioned "Make do with the materials you have."

One of his examples is a animal shelter added to his barn Using post and lintel construction, family labor, and local trees he improved the structure at a cost of about $2,500—the commercially built equivalent comes in at about $20,000

Greg Bowman, Bally, brought the group together under the conviction that food, faith, and farming need to be connected Greg used Psalm 104 as an outline of how God provides for us through farming. Bread (carbohydrates) give us energy, oil helps things run smoothly, and wine symbolizes celebration (You cause the grass to grow for cattle, and plants for people to use, to bring forth good from the earth, and wine to gladden the human heart, oil to make the face shine, and bread to strengthen the human heart Ps. 104:14-15).

In his evening presentation, Satalin illustrated his point with two columns on the paper. In one he listed the keys to the industrial revolution. In the second he contrasted each of those elements with the created order In the furor of an evangelistic preacher, he begged those present to respect the boundaries inherent in the creation. Industrialized farming, he said, goes against the created order. "God set patterns we should follow. GMO's (genetically modified organisms) such as a chicken with 10 percent genes from a goat, or tomatoes with 10% genes of a soybean go against the Creator The problem I have with worshipping at the altar of science is that we have reduced life to protons and neutrons—industrial stuff."

Satalin views the 400 families who buy directly from his farm to be the heart of his livelihood. These customers buy salad bar beef, pasteurized poultry, egg mobile eggs, pigaerator pork, forage-based rabbits, and forestry products The key to raising these products is controlling capital investment through low-cost hoop house shelter, reducing feed costs by rotational use of grazing land, and selling at retail through direct marketing.

Joel has authored two books about alternative farming management and has gained a national following through his lively talks, writings, and attracting many visitors to the farm near Staunton, Va.

In perhaps the most wide-reaching information brought out at this gathering, Marion Bowlan, Manheim, presented some of the conclusions researched by the USDA National Commission on Small Farms. The most disturbing fact they discovered includes the report that on the average, small farms – with gross receipts between $50,000 and $250,000 – had a negative return on equity

Another sign of pressure reported by Bowlan and the Small Farms Commission is that farm receipts for food expenditures amounted to only 23% in 1996, down from 37% in 1980. Other conclusions and their recommendations to the Secretary of Agriculture are published in a 120-page booklet A 15-minute video also presented a few of their findings The 30-member group held hearings in six locations, and made 146 recommendations

Bowlan also represents Pennsylvania Farm Link, a service that connects existing farm owners with people who want to work on farms and, eventually, own them Farm Link has information about properties whose owners are planning to transition out of the business, and people interested in a farm career.

For more information, call the Maryland Farm Link office at (410) 841-5770.

In addition to the regionally know speakers, representatives of three local producers shared their faith and experiences with the group. Roman Stoltzfoos, Kinzers; Ray and Hope Brubaker, Mifflintown; and Katy Reist, Washington Boro all made a connection between their faith and farming.

Roman, one of three generations in his family at the conference, cautioned the group against persons who come in as experts, but who start out on the wrong premise. They leave out the Creator "You will come up with the wrong conclusions 100% of the time when you don't start with the right foundation," he proclaimed passionately.

Joel Satalin, Swoope, Va. outlines the differences between "industrial" and "The Creation." The pillars of the industrial revolution included simplification, specialization, routinization, and mechanization. By contrast The Creation is complex, diverse, dynamic and living. Photo by David Hiebert.

Ray and Hope Brubaker who produce organically grown strawberries, asparagus and rhubarb, noted their journey from being missionaries to the unsaved peoples, to their present work in stewardship. Ray explained that non-conformity to the world has been a religious conviction expressed in the way he dressed early in his life. Now that same conviction motivates many decisions in his farming practices.

Kate Reist, Simple Gifts Farm, Washington Boro, will begin her eighth season of organic farming this year. She spoke of the community support she received through both her CSA (Community Supported Agriculture) customers and the church when her husband died of cancer in January 1998. She said that in farming you learn two things: control and stewardship. On control, she said that farmers soon learn that God is in control and that you need to rely on God. Then you learn that stewardship is care of the earth, God's creation.

One of the goals of the FFFI conference was to help people become aware of resources close to home. About a dozen farmers stood in response to a plea from a woman seeking a local grower of pure food. Thirteen producers registered for the initial network director of food producers, customers and advocates in the Mid-Atlantic region. One participant quoted an article "Sunday News," (published 02/07/99, Lancaster), which reported that 90% of the produce consumed in Lancaster County comes from more than 1,300 miles away

The conference was brought together by representatives of three groups including Greg Bowman, phone (215) 256-0364, Food Faith and Farming, Franconia Mennonite Conference; Marian Bowlan, Farm Link, Inc.; and Suse Greenstone, Creation Continues Educational Services.

Farm Women Societies

Lancaster Society 8

Lancaster Society 18 of Farm Women met at the home of Mae Weaver for a chalk talk by Elva Hurst. Her theme centered on farm memories. As her picture progressed, taped music, and farm yard noises gave voice to various reminders of sunrise and the crowing of the rooster. Special lighting beautifully showed dawn rising. Brighter lights heralded the new day and gently fading light showed the end of the day.

Devotions by Pat Lueck preceded the roll call with members naming the school attended as a child.

President Martha Stoner dismissed the meeting. Many comments of enjoyment of the afternoon were expressed.

Berks Society 6

Berks County Society 6 of Farm Women held its March 16th meeting in the home of Beth Glick. Mary Townsley from Hospice was the speaker.

The group will tend the bake stand from noon to 4 p.m. at the Oley Community Pot Pie Dinner, April 11. Final plans for the Spring Rally were discussed. Five members plan to attend. Marian Gehris, Naomie Mest, and Karen Hoffman will attend Bingo at Berks Heim on April 8. The group voted to give a monetary donation to the outstanding senior in agriculture at Oley Valley High School. Wegman's Restaurant was chosen for the Christmas party in Dec.

The April 20 meeting will be at 7:30 p.m. in the Pleasantville Diner. Members are asked to bring a $5 gift to celebrate everyone's birthday.

Lancaster Society 20

Lancaster Farm Women No 20 met at the Memorial United Methodist Church, Quarryville, on Thursday, April 1, at which time they entertained Societies #15 and #35.

Following the covered dish luncheon, Jean Ressel had the devotions and read from Psalm 1 and a poem. She spoke on the importance of memories and friends. The Lord's Prayer was prayed in unison and the Pledge of Allegiance was used.

The president, Valaria Ferguson, presided at the business meeting and in answer to the roll call the 15 members present responded by naming a war our country has fought in After introducing themselves the guests also responded. The Sunshine Committee reported two cards had been sent to shutins

For the program Tina Voltz told some very interesting Civil War stories and wore a dress, hat and gloves of that era The meeting closed with "music" by the Kitchen Band and ended with "Brighten the Corner."

For the May meeting #20 members will be going to Log Cabin Trees and Trim.

Blending Culturals: A Dad's Perspective on Bring Up a Daughter in America

Ask most fathers and you will find that raising a daughter is a different challenge than raising sons. But what is the impact when two different culturals marry and begin the challenge of raising children?

To answer that question, I asked a co-worker, David Tang to help me understand how culture plays a role in parenting.

David is from Thailand with Chinese ancestors. He arrived in America in 1987 at the age of 37 and is married to Elizabeth, an American citizen David became a naturalized citizen in 1993 and works in Dauphin County as an urban youth agent. He and Elizabeth have two beautiful, talented daughters – Sara, age 11 and Anna, age 9

It is easy to assume that there are differences between the Chinese/Thai and American culturals. The real questions are what are the largest differences and similarities faced in parenting?

David explains that expectations can be quite different.

1 He was expected to marry a Chinese! This would bring honor and status to the family As an American he doesn't plan to limit his girls in their choice of future partners. No arranged marriages either.

2 Education is highly honored, more for sons than daughters, and children are sent away to a boarding school often many miles away from the nucleus family David has high hopes that his girls will attend an institution of higher learning, but neither Elizabeth nor David could imagine sending their young girls away to a distant school.

3. The labor laws are very lax in Thailand. David began working at the age of six selling popsicles. Working was an important value in his family. David still has the value of hard work, but his girls do not work outside the home; however they do have chores and are given small allowances to spend. He views this as teaching money management.

4. As a young boy it was an honor to do chores for no reward for their elders. In America, David observes that this practice isn't always the case He finds that young people often expect a reward for helping others He tries to instill the attitude that families help one another and friends without any expectations

When asked what similarities he saw between the culturals, David had to give great thought to the question He felt that both culturals expect that children will exceed their parents in work, education, and social status. Also, that children are encouraged to reach their potential. And finally, that values are passed on to their children. The emphasis on various values may differ, but the basic values of family, education, hard work and faith are the same.

When asked what difference involves discipline, David was quick to point out that corporal punishment was enforced when he was a young boy, but was done in the aspect of love and not anger. In his family today, David practices positive reinforcement rather than an harsh methods. Teaching respect is an important aspect in his discipline If children respect themselves, they will respect others as well

Most fathers have a long list of fears when it comes to raising daughters, but with a smile David quickly said none! His wife has more fears than he does David's philosophy is that you cannot predict the future for your children. He believes that if you give them them a firm foundation, children will be fine! That certainly must be an eastern point of view Americans often have many more guilt feelings and worry over most every aspect of their children's lives

In summary, I concluded that culture does not play a role in parenting when it comes to which values are shared, how discipline is administered, and certain parental expectations However; basic fact remains, no matter what culture parents love, nurture, and protect their children with all the resource made available to them

It is often easy to see differences between cultures, but with a little thought it is just as easy to see that parents of different cultures are more alike than different.

Western Pennsylvania Plans Relief Sale

GAY BROWNLEE
Somerset Co. Correspondent

SPRINGS (Somerset Co.) — Although 40 giant-sized Relief Sales are held annually to benefit Mennonite Central Committee (MCC), a worldwide missions agency headquartered in Akron, a newly organized sale is planned for the Western Pennsylvania and Maryland area.

The date settled on is Saturday, September 18, at the scenic Garrett County Fairgrounds in McHenry, Md. The site piggybacks on the fame of beautiful Deep Creek Lake, its next-door neighbor.

"The sales are held to raise funds to finance projects in the United States and overseas that reach out to help those who are in need in the name of Jesus Christ," said Dianne Holsopple, event coordinator and board chairperson.

Holsopple is from Hollsopple, Somerset County, and will serve cooperatively with Ernest Holsopple, her husband.

Although an MCC relief sale is held every spring in Harrisburg, Holsopple reports for many years there has been interest in having both an east and west sale in Pennsylvania.

The local area was selected because of its central proximity for volunteers, who will come from Ohio, West Virginia, and Virginia, in addition to Pennsylvania and Maryland.

"It is about three hours from everywhere," Holsopple observed, adding that most of those involved are Mennonite, Amish and Brethren In Christ affiliates.

Donations of quality workmanship are needed whether they be quilts, wall hangings, rugs, furniture, arts or crafts items. The donation committal deadline date is June 30.

Committees are into their respective responsibilities, especially the foods committee, chaired by Elvin and Vera Beitzel of Salisbury, Somerset County.

Beitzel recently led the charge in examining the fairground facilities and was impressed with the equipment he found already in place.

On a walking tour led by the grounds committee — Raymond Yoder, Salisbury, and Donald Sealing, Bittinger, Md. — the party entered each booth as it was unlocked.

"There are a lot of refrigerators and grills," he said, "It looks good to me."

"I think it's grand," added committee member Kathryn Bowser, whose experiences serving on food committees for various large events, span decades.

Serving with Beitzels, are Bowser and Virginia Brenneman from Accident, Md.; Paul and Naomi Yoder, Oakland, Md. and Kay Bender, Grantsville, Md.

The committee, in fact was a few weeks behind schedule in looking the place over after their initial effort was thwarted by three late winter snowstorms that hit the area in early March.

Food safety is a primary issue but the committee is familiar with state inspections and very aware of regulations regarding the same.

Holsopple says every type of food is available at these events, from Pennsylvania Dutch ethnic choices to plain old hot dogs.

One item mentioned was the funny little "moon pie," which was being discussed with a good deal of enthusiasm.

No doubt some willing baker will be happy to flip half the pastry dough over the reconstituted apple filling so an expected long line of hungry takers can each have one.

Besides the food of course, the actual auction will be held while the other activities are simultaneously happening.

There is talk of several sporting events that could be held in conjunction with the event, but their feasibility is still being studied.

A farmer's market will be held and Ten Thousand Villages will participate in the Western Maryland-Pennsylvania Relief Sale to offer international hand-crafts that provide needed income for unemployed and underemployed orkers worldwide.

The Allegheny Mennonite Conference primarily is handling the event. One congregation, Springs Mennonite, reportedly, is challenging other congregations to contribute pre-sale funds.

Quilt referrals must be made to Jane Benson, Grantsville, Md., or Yvonne Dever, Jerome, before June 30. Benson can be called at (301) 895-5893. Dever is at (814) 479-4827.

All other inquiries or donations should be addressed to Holsopple or Dale Miller, the treasurer. Reach Holsopple at (814) 479-7682 and Miller at (724) 864-2037.

Publicity questions are handled by chairperson Harriet Hershberger at (814) 662-2051.

The site is along U.S. 219. Take Interstate 68 West from Cumberland, Md. to Exit-14A at Keysers Ridge, approximately 28 miles.

Or take Route 40 from points east and west to the junction of Route 219 South at Keysers Ridge. Go about 13 miles to the fairgrounds.

Virginia Brenneman, Kay Bender, and Vera Beitzel are members of the food committee for the area's first-ever MCC relief sale.

Vera Beitzel of the foods committee is making notes of her observations for the MCC relief sale.

Pa. State Grange Young Couple Face New Challenge

GETTYSBURG (Adams Co.) — Henry and Madeline Seidel are living proof that opposites really do attract. When Henry, a self-avowed conservative and very disciplined individual, started dating Madeline in 1994, it was her free spirit that attracted him to her. Now, after three years of marriage and recently being named the Pennsylvania State Grange's Young Couple for 1999-2000, it's those "differences" that makes their union an exciting, but challenging, adventure.

"Marriage takes a lot of work," Henry said. "You've got to work hard to communicate. By communicating, we keep those little things in our lives from becoming big, troublesome things."

"In the three years we've been married I've learned you can't change a person," Madeline said. "And that there is a need for communication."

Galen Kopp, Lebanon County extension agent, presented the awards from state days. The junior team from Lebanon County won first place last year at the state contest, and they each received personalized plaques: Travis Adam, Tim Schaeffer, Nathan Spatz, and Nathan Tice. The team was coached by Brian Kreider and Daryl Bomgardner. Brian also gave highlights of the past year's judging team, and thanked all the members for coming out. He also thanked those breeders in the county who allow the team to use their facilities and animals for practices. The coaches for 1999 will be Kreider, Dan Atkins, and Tim Fleener. Jon Harnish also assists the team.

The highlight of the evening was the presentation of the outstanding member awards. This year's rookie winner was 16-year-old Angela Decker. As a first-year member, she showed both market lambs and hogs at the fair, roundup, and Farm Show. She is a junior at Northern Lebanon, where she also participated in FFA and is an officer.

The junior member award went to Brandon Winebark. Brandon showed beef and hogs at the area and many out-of-area contests. He also participated in livestock judging and is a member of Richland Church of the Brethren.

The senior outstanding member was Tim Schaeffer. Tim also showed both beef and hogs, was on the livestock judging team that won at state days and also participates in sports and FFA at Eastern Lebanon County High School.

Pa. State Grange Young Couple

Clover Lane in Wyomissing, were recently named Young Couple during the Youth Department's Young Adult/Young Marrieds weekend retreat in Adams County.

In the coming year, they will represent the state Grange and its Youth Department at local, state and national functions. As Young Couple, they will travel to Leadership School, the state convention in Allentown and the National Grange Convention in Portland, Maine, this fall and the Pennsylvania Farm Show, as well as visit local Grange meetings to discuss the youth program.

Although Henry, who is 30, has been active in Grange since the age of 5 in the Junior program, Madeline, who is also 30, only became a Granger after she started dating her future husband. It is the community service work of their Subordinate (local) Grange at Virginville that appeals to her

"We are trying to give people in the community an appreciation of what the Grange is and an awareness of what the Grange is doing for the community," Madeline said. "We may run a fund-raiser, but we take those funds and put them right back into the community. I believe people are more likely to join if they know who you are and what you are doing for the community."

To help encourage awareness of the Grange, Virginville Grange recently launched a Promotions Committee, on which Henry is a member. One such venture of the Promotions Committee, which replaced the Membership Committee, is to sponsor Virginville's Community Yard Sale this spring. Madeline, who is Flora at Virginville and on its Junior and Fair committees, said they also hold a Farm Safety Workshop and a Community Service Recognition program to honor members of like-minded organizations.

Henry, who is a past state officer (assistant steward), said he likes Grange for the friendships he has made over the years. It is those friendships, he added, that help keep him active.

Other positions currently held by Henry include Pomona (county) assistant steward, Pomona Youth/Young Married co-chairman, with his wife, and the Fair Display Committee.

"Those of us who came up through the junior and youth programs are now becoming more involved in state Grange," Henry said. "We've grown up together in the Grange and there is a bond among us."

In addition to the Grange, both are active in their local church. Henry, who is employed as a sales representative with VICO Associates of Chicago, Ill., enjoys playing volleyball and softball.

Madeline, who is employed as an administrative assistant for a self-employed businessman, likes to cross-stitch and read. Both Henry and Madeline also cite spending time with her 12-year-old son Brandon as one of their leisure activities.

Other finalists for the title of Young Couple at the retreat were: James and Georgette Klotz, first runners-up, of Hartslog Valley Grange in Huntingdon County and Kenneth and Wendy Kerschner of Alleghenyville Grange in Berks County

The Pennsylvania State Grange Youth Department, for members ages 14-35, places an emphasis on education, leadership development, fellowship and fun.

The Pennsylvania State Grange is an agricultural, rural and community service organization with over 31,000 members in 66 counties. The Grange is dedicated to improving life in rural Pennsylvania through grass-roots legislation, performing community service work and offering members services including health insurance and a credit union.

Maryland Sheep & Wool Festival To Feature Rare Leicester Long Wool Sheep

WEST FRIENDSHIP, Md. — Two hundred-year-old sheep and their wonderful wool will be featured at the 26th annual Maryland Sheep & Wool Festival, in a special presentation on Colonial Williamsburg's rare Leicester Longwools. Tens of thousands of visitors are expected May 1 and 2 held at the Howard County Fairgrounds in West Friendship. The event offers free admission and parking.

More than 1,000 entries are expected for the centerpiece sheep show. Morris Culver will judge the long wool sheep, while Dave Clouser chooses the best in the medium and fine wool classes. Cotswold breeders will hold their national show at Maryland this year, while Lincoln Breeders gather for their Eastern regional event.

A blade shearer will demonstrate the old fashioned by-hand method of wool removal. More than 250 vendors will offer wares from woolen apparel to spinning and knitting supplies to jewelry and paintings. Other activities include the fleece show, a sheep-to-shawl event, skein and garment competition, shearing contest, Shepherd's Lead and sheep dog demonstrations.

The Maryland Sheep & Wool Festival takes place at the Howard County Fairgrounds in West Friendship, Maryland from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. Saturday, May 1 and from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Sunday, May 2.

Visitors must leave pets at home; they will not be permitted on the fairgrounds. Questions should be directed to Leslie Bauer at the Festival Office, P.O. Box 99, Glenwood, MD 21738, (410) 531-3647 or visit the Festival web site at www.SheepandWoolFestival.org.

Tens of thousands of visitors are expected May 1 and 2 held at the Howard County Fairgrounds in West Friendship. The event offers free admission and parking.

Colonial Williamsburg recreates 18th century living, including livestock representative of George Washington's time. Elaine Shirley, livestock husbander for Colonial Williamsburg and board of directors member for the American Livestock Breeds Conservancy, will discuss how the Leicester Longwool sheep was selected for the restoration.

"After teetering on extinction in North America in the 1980s, the breed currently numbers over 100 animals, established in 12 flocks across the region. Handspinners love its long, lustrous wool," Shirley said.

Leicester Longwools from Colonial Williamsburg's flock will be on hand in the Festival's breed display barn and participate in the "Parade of Breeds."

Shirley's talk will also touch on her experience with other heritage livestock breeds including Milking Devon cattle and American Cream horses.

American Hereford Association To Host Industry Field Day

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Beef producers have an opportunity to learn about the feedlot environment and the direction the cattle industry is heading at the 1999 Genetic Outreach Program (GOP) Field Day, coordinated by the American Hereford Association (AHA) in Kearney, Neb., May 10-11.

Industry guests and breeders will gather at the Prairie Hills Golf Course, Kearney, Neb., for a social and barbecue sponsored by Pfizer Animal Health. For $7.50, participants will hear a Cargill representative explain the Beef Works Electronic Management System and enjoy Certified Hereford Beef®. Prior to the fact-finding events, golfers will tee off at 11 a.m., for the annual GOP Best Ball Tournament. A $35 cost covers green fees, cart and lunch.

Registration begins at 7:30 a.m., Tuesday, May 11, at the Regency Inn, Kearney, Neb. At 8:15 a.m., Dr. John Mayer, Pfizer Animal Health representative, will discuss the Beef Quality Assurance Program.

Dr. Dan Moser, professor of animal sciences at Kansas State University, will discuss carcass EPDs and opportunities for the seedstock and commercial producer. Capturing tenderness for the consumer will be presented by Dr. Brad Morgan, Oklahoma State University, followed by Mike Richter, director of meat for Coborn's Inc., St. Cloud, Minn., discussing the challenges and opportunities for the retail meat business.

Dwayne Lewis, owner and operator of host feedlot for the GOP program, will conclude the morning session and speak to guests about current feedlot practices. Speakers will host a question and answer session prior to lunch.

After lunch, breeders will travel to Dwayne Lewis Feedlot Inc., for a look at the 1,127 head of steers on feed in the largest GOP feedlot and carcass test to date. Feed yard personnel will give a tour of the yard as well as show participants the advanced technology and electronic management system that will provide data and sorts for fat thickness, frame score, weight and incremental cost of gain. Cattlemen can physically see mid-test results and hear predictions on optimum endpoint dates and ability of the cattle to meet value-based grid targets. Tuesday's program, which includes lunch, costs $15.

Registration deadline is April 30. Contact Joe Rickabaugh at AHA at (816) 842-3757 for information.

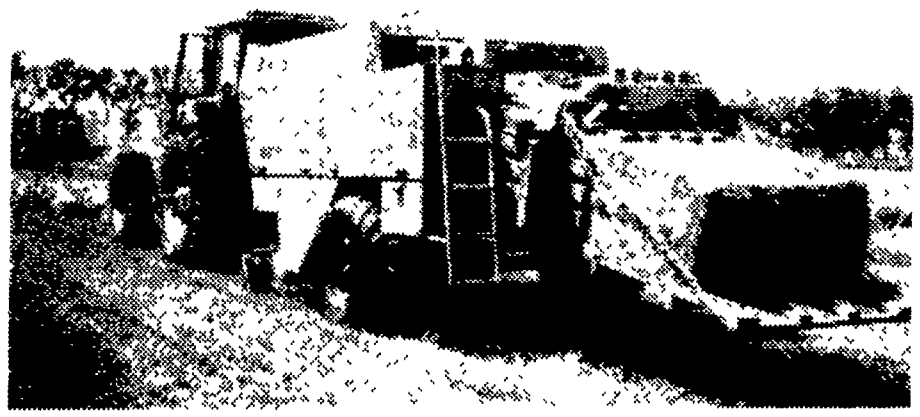
The CLAAS® Quadrant 1200 square baler—The new standard equipment for commercial operators



CLAAS doesn't have to sell a commercial operator on the advantages he gets from large, densely-packed square bales

Yes, the Quadrant 1200 delivers the density commercial operators want Yes, its bales inhibit spoilage by keeping the air out Yes, they preserve quality because they minimize nutrient loss

The 1200 also offers the high production capacities you demand Its 4 ft x 2-1/4 ft x up to 8 ft long bales effectively increase storage space and dramatically increase transport capacities—all at a high productivity rate And you know what this means to your bottom line

The Quadrant makes easy work of dry hay, haylage and silage crops—whatever you've got And it bales as much of it as you've got

CLAAS's shaft-driven knotters have earned a worldwide reputation for reliability and low maintenance Other notable features are its 3-stage pre-chamber, 78" wide pickup, powerful transmission, heavy-duty worm gear, 1000rpm pto, hydraulic density control, capacity for up to 24 balls of sisal or plastic twine, and of course 6 dependable CLAAS shaft-driven knotters

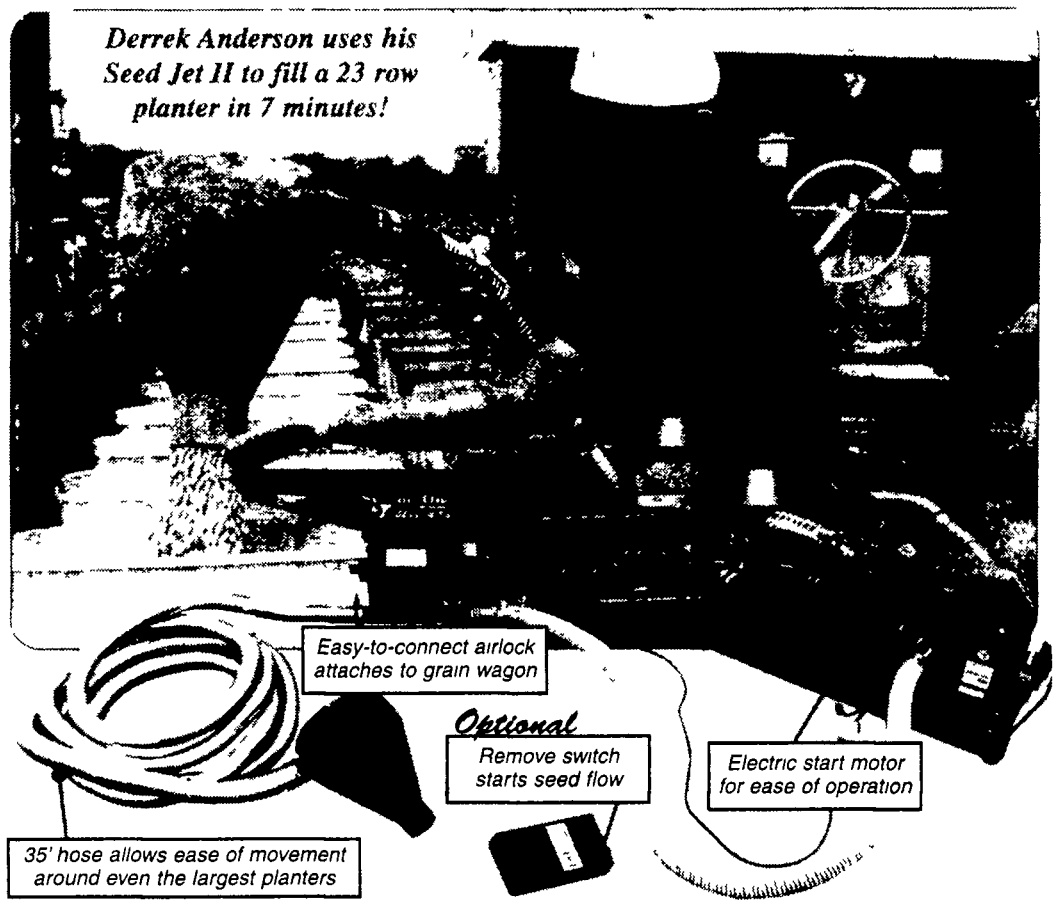
Air Power SEED JET II & SEED PARTNER

Imagine filling a drill or planter in just a few minutes – when minutes count! It's possible with Yetter bulk seed handling equipment; Seed Jet II and the Seed Partner. The Seed Jet II delivers seed from a bulk bin to your drill or planter on a gentle stream of air. The Seed Partner incorporates a Seed Jet II and a 100 bushel polytank for total flexibility.

Customer surveys have shown the Seed Jet II can fill a 23 row planter in 7 minutes. Spend your time putting seed in the ground and not filling your implement. Farm more acres each day. Save money by buying seed in bulk.



Derrek Anderson uses his Seed Jet II to fill a 23 row planter in 7 minutes!
Easy-to-connect airlock attaches to grain wagon
Optional
Remove switch starts seed flow
Electric start motor for ease of operation
35' hose allows ease of movement around even the largest planters

Seed Jet II

Stand at your drill or planter, hold the decelerator over the box and let the seed flow! The Seed Jet II has an improved airlock and blower system to move more seed than ever The airlock easily attaches under the most popular brands of grain wagons Air flow is generated by an 11 horsepower motor and positive displacement blower assembly and the airlock introduces the seed to the air stream seed Seed travels down a 2-1/4" diameter, 35" long, stainless steel hose to a decelerator which gently swirls the seed before setting it into the drill or planter There's no need to reposition your implement like when using an auger system Tests show that the Seed Jet II can safely move soybeans, corn, wheat and rice

Seed Jet II filling a JD 750 Drill

An independent laboratory concluded that there is "no significant affect on germination" of seed handled with the gentle Seed Jet II.

IS THIS SOMETHING I CAN LIVE WITHOUT?

Yes. But it's an excellent way to lower the cost of cooling milk. It reduces milk temperature with water pumped straight out of your well. Mueller® precoolers are available in sizes to work with any system. If lower electric bills would make your life easier, call us and ask for more information on Mueller precoolers.

Cut stall clean-out time by 50% with a Millcreek Compact Spreader.

"The spreading efficiency sure outweighs the price. This is a wonderful machine. I couldn't be more pleased."
EARL SINKS - Brock, Texas

Say "Good-Bye" to back-breaking manure handling and cut stall clean-out time in half. Hook an affordable Millcreek Compact Spreader to your 10 hp garden tractor, take it right to the stall for easy loading. No more wheelbarrow.

Millcreek Spreaders last and last

Since spreaders are our specialty, we put more into each one. For example our 20-year guaranteed floor will never rust or rot. Positive chain drive provides excellent spreading action. And tough steel construction holds up to rugged farm use. Seven sizes, for 1-horse barns to 50-horse stables. PTO and ground drive models available.

NEW HOLLAND HERD SEES INCREASE

- Peaks
- RHA
- Improved Reproduction

King Farm, New Holland

"Our cows have increased in milk production to 22,408 since coming on the AIM program in April of 1998. We use some BST, but not on high peaking cows. It had been over 2 years since any of our cows had peaked over 120 lb. milk per day. We now have cows over that level and are holding higher production longer. Our March 1998 test was 70 lb. milk at 155 Days in milk. Our March 1999 test was 72.3 lb. milk at 187 Days in Milk!

We are especially happy with the increase in our herd average. The forages we are feeding this year, just aren't as good as last year's. The ability to customize the AIM to our specific forages has helped us to keep production increasing.

In addition to the custom AIM supplement and AIM top dress for our milking herd, we are using the total Ultra BALANCE calf, heifer, and dry cow programs. We are very happy with the new Ultra BALANCE calf starter. Calves start eating it earlier and really take off.

We are very happy with the service from Sensenig's Feed Mill.

Frustrated With Conventional Farming, Grazier Employs New Ideas

CAROLYN N. MOYER
Tioga Co. Correspondent

MANSFIELD (Tioga Co.) — Some people might know Kress Simpson for his involvement with Simalot Holsteins, a high-producing, All American class Holstein herd located near here. Some might know him for his keen eye as a dairy cattle judge.

But today, though Simpson still loves his dairy cattle and enjoys the time he spends working as a show official, he has turned the tables on conventional farming techniques.

Since he was a little boy, farming meant pushing for production, breeding to top-notch sires, and plowing up the land to sow the crops necessary to push the cows higher and higher.

"The frustrations that dealt with the conventional system and all the labor involved leads me to this. When I got married, it changed all kinds of things," noted Simpson as he explains why he became a "grass farmer."

In search of a different way of farming, Simpson traveled to Susquehanna County with area farmer Caleb Williams and Tioga County Extension Agent Craig Williams to attend a pasture meeting. Simpson and his father, Roy, had talked about placing more emphasis on grazing prior to the meeting.

"We talked to the farmers and looked at grass and pastures and all that stuff and on the way home we were discussing some of this. Dad and I had already started practicing some

Conference Highlights Ways To Construct, Stabilize Laneways

ANDY ANDREWS
Lancaster Farming Staff

GRANTVILLE (Dauphin Co.) — Laneways are essential to getting your cattle to feed. The keys to good laneways or alleyways: keep them as narrow as possible, use quality materials, and importantly, compact them as much as possible.

Ways in which producers can construct and best utilize laneways were under review by J.B. Harrold, Project Grass coordinator with the Natural Resources Conservation Service (NRCS) and Bill Stout, USDA Agriculture Research Service (ARS).

Both spoke in March at the Pennsylvania Grazing and Forage Conference at the Grantville Holiday Inn.

Harrold said that alleyways are the "means" of a grazing system, used to move cattle to the barn for milking, to feed supplemental feed, and to lead cattle to water.

Harrold spoke about the step-by-step process to thinking through the construction of an alleyway, use of

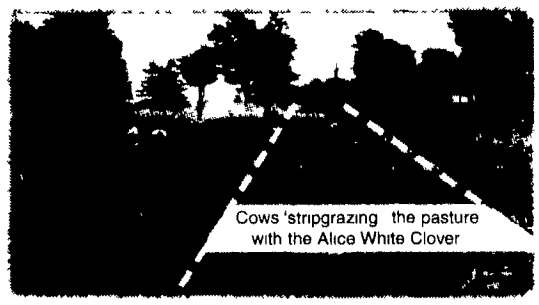
Alice White Clover



Cows 'stripgrazing the pasture with the Alice White Clover

ALICE White Clover. The grass really benefits from the Nitrogen being fixed and released by the ALICE White Clover. It is estimated that the ALICE White Clover fixes up to 200 units of Nitrogen per acre. Another remarkable thing is noted by the above photo the strips without the ALICE White Clover do have some spots with some volunteer white clover At those spots the grass does not show increased production at all, and the cows don't even like it This proves the point that improved varieties like ALICE White Clover fix much more Nitrogen than the traditional white clovers and that it is more palatable. The picture also shows that cows really love the grass with the white clover, giving a new meaning to the work 'stripgrazing'

Characteristics of ALICE White Clover;
Very palatable • High Nitrogen fixation • Good winter hardiness • Large leaves • Tall vigorous growth • Performs extremely well under grazing management

Baridana Orchardgrass

BARIDANA a late maturing winterhardy Orchardgrass with excellent grazing characteristics BARIDANA was developed in continental Europe (Czech Republic) and it has been tested under severe conditions It has proven to withstand severe winters, but also is capable of coping with dry and hot summers If mixed with white clover (Alice) and or Chicory (Forage Feast, Puna) those pastures will become excellent summer producers allowing to graze or hay during dry periods in the summer Compared to the industry's standard (Potomac) BARIDANA has several advantages Later heading • More palatable • Higher digestible • More winterhardy • Higher yielding BARIDANA is also very suitable for intensive grazing or cutting Its primary use will be the Midwest and the Northeast of the United States BARIDANA is also very suitable for hay production with yields of up to 7 tons of DM per acre BARIDANA orchardgrass is well suited for mixed seeding with alfalfa's, since it is winterhardy and late maturing They can be planted at the same time since orchardgrass is not to aggressive in its establishment This results in a nice combined stand and does not complicate the harvest window materials, construction, and maintenance.

The first question many producers must ask is, how wide should the alleyway be? Harrold thinks "as narrow as possible," he said.

"One of the biggest mistakes I see first-time graziers make is they make their alleyways 20-, 25-, or 30-feet wide," said Harrold. "Your alleyways are sacrifice lots."

Some producers believe cattle would like to graze back through the alleyway. But because of manure droppings, the cattle don't want to eat the grass. By keeping the alleyways narrow and stabilized, costs are kept low.

The width should also be determined by the type of fence and the equipment that will be used on it. Depending on size, different types of fencing could work, including high-tensile or polywire.

Lanes should be established to allow cattle to get access to water. Harrold believes there should be water available in each paddock. "I think that's the best way to go," he said.

If using a central watering area, producers should leave enough room around the trough to get the cattle in and out without crowding them or allowing them to push through the fences.

There are a lot of different materials available to stabilize the alleyways. Harrold noted producers can use fabric, concrete, shale, and limestone. Experiments in using fly ash, a by-product of using culm in co-generation power plants, can act like cement.

"One thing to keep in mind," he told those attending the grazing conference, "some of those are better than others. But a 'cheap solution' stabilization now might be costly in the long run."

Several NRCS experiments in Somerset and Westmoreland counties are looking at ways of constructing long-lasting alleyways. These are the steps outlined by NRCS:

1. Excavate and remove all organic matter. Excavation may have to reach 6-12 inches in depth to solid ground. One project involved the use of filter fabric. "If you start to put rock and filter fabric on ground that hasn't been excavated to a sold base, the alleyway will sink and cause problems," said Harrold. The NRCS project uses a Class 4 nonwoven geotextile filter fabric at a cost of 30 to 60 cents a square foot.

2. Next, remove all debris, including wood, rocks, etc. Filter fabric is laid down, which acts like a carpet, but water penetrates through it. The fabric serves two purposes — it separates the mud and earth from rock and distributes the weights of animals and equipment as they walk on top of it.

3. The first material laid down is a base rock, a subgrade material. The NRCS uses ASSHTO #1 coarse aggregate rock, about 3-4 inches in diameter. How much depends on the slope. If there is a 0-8 percent slope, minimum amount of rock is 6 inches; at 8-12 percent slope, minimum is 8 inches; if 12-20 percent slope, minimum is 10 inches. NRCS has not tried to stabilize an alleyway with a slope greater than 20 percent yet, according to Harrold. One project in Somerset County had a 10 percent slope and 6 inches of ASSHTO #1.

4. "The main thing to making this thing work is compaction," said Harrold. If you don't compact it, it settles, and "instead of a nice crowned alleyway or a sloped alleyway, you end up with potholes," Harrold said. "Water lays on it just like the road — it ends up destroying it." NRCS recommends a minimum of two passes with 10-ton track equipment, bulldozed over with fabric and rock to compact well.

5. In the middle layer or top layer, use additional stone, 2A modified, about 4 inches thick. The NRCS recommends six passes with a vibratory 10-ton roller. In Somerset County, the project used 4 inches of 2A modified.

6. To keep cattle from developing hoof problems, in the Somerset County project, an additional 2-inch thick limestone layer was installed. "We rolled it down and it worked really good," Harrold said.

One of the main reasons alleyways sometimes fail, according to Harrold, is that the lanes are "just like a road," he said. "We have to control the surface water."

When they are installed, the alleyways are flat and crowned, allowing water to roll off the top. Sometimes diversion lanes are set up to allow the water to flow in a sheet on a steep slope. "The more crown we get in these alleyways, the better off we'll be," he said.

The cost of a completed NRCS-type alleyway? From $1 to $1.25 a square foot, according to Harrold. "It's like building a road," he said.

The keys are try to avoid locating the laneway in wet soils and steep slopes, use filter fabric, keep the compaction up, use limestone dust to create a final layer, crown the top, look into surface water control, and maintain it.

For surface water control, waterbars at certain angles can help control any erosion to the surface. For steeper slopes, NRCS may be steering away from using dust because of potential erosion.

"It's just like anything else," he said. "We have to maintain it in order for it to be around for a long time."

Costs can be cut if producers plan on using the alleyway strictly for livestock. Then, "you can probably ease up on the rock and therefore reduce some of the costs," said Harrold.

Bill Stout, USDA soil scientist, spoke about the use of fly ash, which acts like concrete. The material comes from co-generation plants, a by-product used in refilling areas from coal mine strippings. More work is under way on three projects to determine the effectiveness of using the fly ash in laneways. The projects include two farms in Cambria County and one in Somerset.

The cost of the fly ash is 8 cents per mile per ton, delivered to Somerset from 50 miles away.

Most of the fly ash from the co-generation power plants is going to landfill, to fill in strip mines.

Penn State Releases Pasture Growth Study

WELLSBORO (Tioga Co.) — In New Zealand and Ireland, farmers look at grass growth charts in the newspapers. These charts show how fast the grass is growing compared to last year and the past history.

Then the farmers compare this information with what is happening on their farm. How fast is the grass growing? Should I change my paddocks sooner? Should I slow down my rotation? Is my pasture budget projection similar to what is happening in the fields?

These types of questions can be answered with knowing how fast the grass is growing and how much your cattle are consuming. Every year may be different, but can we plan for these differences and see them coming?

The study measured the grass growth of seven farms across Pennsylvania durnng a two-year period from 1997-1998. In each county:

• Seven agents would collect pasture growth rates once every week (each has one farm in their county). The agents are NE Region: Craig Williams, coordinator, Dave Hartman, Mark Madden; SE region, Glenn Shirk and Jerry Martin, Mena Hautau, and Clyde Myers; and west region, Bob Brown.

• On each farm, each agent would measure five paddocks with the Alistair Electronic pasture gauge.

• The paddocks were mostly mixed grasses, a typical Pennsylvania pasture, but notes collected if a measurement seemed out of the normal by plant type or other factor.

• A growth rate curve would be started that could then be compared to other studies and counties. The growth rates would be the start of a Pennsylvania database and baseline of how fast pasture grows in Pennsylvania. In the 1997 study, the pasture grew an average of 44 pounds per day and in 1998 it averaged 47 pounds per day. Many farms had drier conditions in 1998. They also had excellent conditions earlier in the year, thus making it hard to manage grass growth.

• Measuring pasture growth and pasture cover are the two items that most of the New Zealand and Irish papers talk about.

Pasture growth is the speed at which the pasture is growing per day. If your pasture is growing at 50 pounds of growth per day and thus 350 pounds in a week (about 2-3

Chloride Is Important For Balanced Nutrition

NORCROSS, Ga. — Chloride is an essential plant nutrient. In some regions chloride levels in the soil have become low enough that wheat cannot realize its full yield potential. In coastal areas, chloride is supplied in rain water. In areas farther inland, chloride is usually supplied by use of potash fertilizer.

However, in areas such as the Great Plains, little potash is applied to soils, but crops continue to take potassium and chloride out of the soil. If these nutrients are never replenished, their levels in the soil drop. Chloride soil test levels drop faster than potassium soil test levels because chloride is mobile in soils, just like nitrate. As rain percolates through the soil, it takes chloride with it, moving it deeper in the soil, where plant roots have a hard time getting to it.

Soil testing can be helpful. If samples taken to a 2-foot depth test below 30 pounds of chloride per acre, there is a good chance that wheat will respond to chloride fertilization. However, there are many factors that enter into wheat response. Research has shown that some varieties respond better to chloride fertilization than others. The levels of other nutrients, such as nitrogen, phosphorus, and potassium must also be in good supply before you can expect to notice a response to chloride. For instance, if phosphorus soil test levels are low, phosphorus, rather than chloride, is more likely to be the factor limiting crop yields. The yield responses to chloride fertilization are not as large as for these other nutrients. Data from South Dakota indicates an average spring wheat yield response of 4 bushels per acre to chloride fertilization when soil tests taken down to two feet are at or below 30 pounds of chloride per acre.

Tissue testing is a great way to see how your crop is doing. Tissue testing is the best indicator of the chloride nutrition of wheat. The sample should be a collection of whole shoots in the boot to flowering stage. If the plant concentration is less than 0 12 percent, there is an 80 percent chance that the crop will respond to chloride fertilization. At concentrations of 0.13 to 0.40 percent, there is about a 50 percent chance of response. Above 0.40 percent, little chance of response exists. If soil samples are taken too late in the season to practically apply chloride, plant tissue data still provides information upon which future fertilization plans can be made.

Proper chloride fertilizer can provide many benefits beyond yield. Research on wheat has shown that chloride can increase plant resistance to several diseases as well as enable the plant to better withstand disease pressures. Photosynthetic activity in diseased leaves, most importantly the flag leaf is reduced. This results in poor grain fill, lighter kernel weights, and lower yields. Diseased roots and stems cannot adequately provide nutrients and water to developing heads. Chloride has been shown to increase the resistance of wheat to the foliar diseases tanspot, stripe rust, leaf rust, and septoria and to the root diseases take-all root rot and common and root rot.

There is great flexibility in fertilizer chloride placement. Broadcast, banded, and top-dress applications are all equally effective. In higher rainfall areas, where chloride has a greater chance of leaching, spring topdress applications may be the most efficient. Placement with the seed can result in salt injury to seedlings if rates are too high.

Balanced nutrition is the key to getting the most yield and profit out of a wheat crop. Nitrogen alone will not produce the highest wheat yields. Phosphorus alone will not do it either. All essential nutrients must be in good supply to boost yields and profitability to high levels. Chloride fertilization is an important part of a balanced fertility program. The best way to know whether it will work for you is to try it on a test area and see what happens. You may find that chloride will be important for getting the most out of your wheat crop.

inches). Then in three weeks there would be about 1,050 more pounds of grass in that paddock. Fifty cows eating 20 pounds of pasture would eat 1,000 pounds every day. So these cows should not be allowed back into this paddock for three weeks if you want to keep the pasture grazed off at the same level. This is the beginning of pasture budgeting.

Pasture cover is just the average of the amount of grass in all of your paddock, including tall and short paddocks. Just take all the paddocks, record your estimate of the pounds of grass in each one, and divide by the total acres in all the paddocks. If your pasture cover average gets too high, then your grass may get too mature before you can graze it. If your pasture cover average gets too low, then you may not be letting the grass have a long enough rest. In the beginning of a dry period or summer, the average cover will start to lower and the paddocks that have been grazed will show slow regrowth speed.

Cattle Learn To Select Best Forages

GRANTVILLE (Dauphin Co.) — Animals on pasture have been working for millennia to perfect the process of forage selection at ground level, while university research on the process stretches back only about 50 years.

Determining exactly how a grazing animal can select for plant parts with protein levels differing sometimes to a minuscule percentage as part of the their genetic programming continues to receive university attention, according to a forage expert who spoke at this year's Pennsylvania Grazing and Forage Conference at the Holiday Inn, Grantville, in March.

"I put a lot of confidence in animals, in what they can do," said Jim Gerrish of the Forage Systems Research Center of the University of Missouri. Gerrish noted the grazing animals develop almost a "business sense" of how to select for improved nutrient value among the forages in the field, generation after generation.

And scientists are still trying to understand how.

In the meantime, work on improving forage quality continues at the university.

Gerrish spoke about steps to obtain and maintain pasture quality.

Gerrish noted that he had recently returned from a national symposium on forage quality. He examined a manual totalling 1,050 pages and managed to come up with a simple, working definition of forage quality: "low fiber, high protein, and tasting good," he said.

To do that, producers have to understand the reproductive growth of the forage and how to maintain that growth for optimum quality.

For many producers, using an intensive rotational grazing system can be more cost-effective when producing milk than when raising finishing calves or managing feeders.

But to obtain maximum forage quality, improve gain efficiency in the cattle, and boost milk production in the dairy herd, what happens in the paddocks between April 1 and May 15 can spell success or doom for getting good pasture quality.

That time period "will dictate what we'll have in terms of quality the rest of the year," he said.

The key is to run short grazing periods with high stock density to manage the forage grazed. Those first six weeks of intense management is important, grazing them hard enough to keep them from stemming but not too hard that they can't recover.

And cool season grasses can be grazed through the season.

"Cool season grasses are not low quality in the summertime unless you allow them to stem," Gerrish noted.

Time is critical when determining how to manage forage quality. Manage the pastures for animal intake needs.

Many grasses need to be maintained before extensive leaf, and eventually buds, appear on them. The closer to the bud and bloom stage, the less forage quality of the plant. The more the plant matures, and the longer the season stretches on, the more forage quality declines.

Legumes will provide higher quality forages overall than grasses, though producers shouldn't leave out the potential for warm-season grasses in a drought. And weeds have their forage potential, to some extent, especially under rough drought conditions.

"My favorite warm season weed is crabgrass," noted Gerrish.

But coming up with a definition of "weed" can be difficult, since some of the broadleaves and grass weeds have forage merit. The question producers need to ask themselves: is the weed displacing productive forage? But under drought conditions, it would help having a legume.

In Missouri, Gerrish noted that red clover, which can withstand drought because of its deeper root over white clover, is interseeded in places at about six pounds per acre. Clover is regularly broadcast as frost seed after the last snow and proves to be a high-quality legume and one of the most cost-efficient ways to boost forage quality in existing pasture stands.

The additional value of the clover component in the forage can add up to $8-$9 of real value every year. It can prove to be "one of the best paybacks on the dollar in the beef cow/calf feeding business, just by overseeding it," Gerrish said.

Gerrish spoke about ways to improve pasture stands.

There are no simple solutions to dealing with problem pastures, according to the University of Missouri grazing specialist and grazier. "You need to take a systematic approach to the problems and try to correct several of these factors," he said.

In many cases, simply spreading nitrogen down is a quick, easy, but ultimately lost payoff for turning the quality of forages around. What producers need to do is soil test and see if soil pH using lime or bringing phosphorous levels to optimum levels can be done cost-effectively.

However, in many cases, the animal returns most of the nutrients to the land. Often those nutrients are displaced in shady areas, under trees, or near water sources. So managing that distribution of manure is key.

Gerrish noted that a 1,100-pound beef cow puts out about $100 pounds of nitrogen, phosphorous, and potassium per year.

About two-thirds of that is dropped near a water trough or a shade tree — nonproductive areas of a grazing operation.

Gerrish resumed speaking about improving pasture quality through interseeding legumes. But when doing so, producers need to select a legume that fits the soil environment and "slowly build up the fertilization over time," Gerrish said, "in small increments over a long period."

To do so, control competition growth by grazing, clipping, burning, tillage, or by chemical methods. Interseed legumes, frost seeding effectively, using broadcast and harrow, or no-till drill. "Hoof and tooth" methods, using cattle to tramp seed in, can take too long.

Manage grazing through the application of the proper stocking rate, provide a rest period so the plants can recover, and don't graze too short or too late in the fall. Gerrish noted that he stops grazing 30-40 days before frost.

For legume interseeding, spring works better. For grass, late summer interseeding is best.

Ed Rits
Natural Beef Producer
Honey Grove

Spring has arrived on our farm. Five new calves were born in the last 10 days and the grass is starting to grow.

It's a little slower than in some other springs. It will be great to get back to grazing all our animals, again.

Let me introduce myself. I am a retired soil conservationist. Along with my wife, Lorraine, we live on and operate a 200-acre Century Farm. One hundred acres are woodland and 100 acres are used for pasture and hay.

We usually have about 30 crossbred beef cows, 30 calves, and 30 yearlings. We use no chemicals or drugs and sell freezer beef as "natural beef."

For the past 10 years we have been using management intensive grazing as our principal harvesting method for 7 to 8 months of the year and round bale dry hay for 4 to 5 months. One of my long-term goals is to be able to graze 10 to 11 months.

Each year we do an on-farm demonstration project. Past demonstrations have been to:

- Compare water consumption when coming from black pipe or white pipe;
- Compare the advantages and disadvantages of 12 min-tubs used in our pasture system;
- Compare the use of compost or stable manure to provide nutrients and to control grazing height;
- Frost-seeding modern improved seeds into old hay fields by no-till, frost, and with a light disc.
- Seeding various new grasses and legumes such as pitua white clover, matua prairie grass, Barcell tall fescue, festulolium, and several rye grasses.

This year we are going to reseed a three-acre old hay field that we used as a winter dry lot. A light discing will be followed by a spinner spreader with 4# pitua white clover and 10# citadel ryegrass per acre on about April 1. With good weather the field will be a green carpet by April 20. We will make hay about July 4 and then graze in August and October.

As president of PFAC, I have outlined four areas I would like to emphasize this year:

1. Increase the dissemination of research information developed at Penn State and the USDA pasture lab in agricultural publications such as Lancaster Farming;
2. Increase PFAC involvement with forage field days and an on-farm demonstration and research project;
3. Increase PFAC members and former director involvement in PFAC committees and activities;
4. Increase PFAC membership by 25.

And speaking of PFAC membership, members recently received their copy of Pennsylvania Forage and Grassland News that contained three excellent short research reports written in a manner that farmers can use the information immediately; thanks to Marvin Hall.

If you didn't get to see these research reports, join PFAC and receive the four special newsletters each year. The form is included this issue.

As a producer, I receive a number of trade publications. The April 1999 issue of New Holland News had an article on Overseeding of Alfalfa and How to Double Yield. But you must add 80 pounds to 100 pounds of nitrogen per acre to get a big crop.

Lester Vough, Maryland extension agronomist, said, "Small grain notilled on alfalfa in the fall can give you a huge boost in forage the next spring. Barley, wheat, or triticale . . . can about double your first cutting yield the next spring."

Contact your New Holland dealer to see how you can receive the New Holland News.

Frustrated With Conventional Farming, Grazier Employs New Ideas

of this on the farm, but we were used to the same system everybody else was; let the cows out to pasture, let them come back in, and feed them their food. I think it was out of desperation. We were short of feed and short of money," he said.

After attending the meeting, however, Simpson decided to look into pasturing more intensively.

"The cheapest way to feed a cow is to let her graze. Cows are born to graze, so we should allow them to do it. They have four legs and their mouths are built to go forage their own feed, not for us to haul feed to them," he said.

Simpson drove his point home when he noted that farmers who do not let their cows graze are essentially in a transfer-of-nutrients game.

"All they want to do is haul feed from the field to the cow and from the back end of the cow to the field," he said. "When you graze, the cows go to the field, eat, and deposit the whatever afterward. So there's no transfer of nutrients. The only nutrients they're moving is to the milking facility in the form of the product that we're selling."

Simpson further expanded his pasture research by weaving the concepts of holistic management into the process.

"Caleb Williams invited me to come hear a guy speak — his name was Allen Savory and he wrote a book on holistic management," he explained. "So I listened to him and he started answering all my questions about, 'why am I frustrated, why do I have to work so hard, this isn't working and that's not working,' everything just was haywire. I listened to him and everything made sense. When you look at life as a whole, everything is cyclical and everything revolves around nature."

At the time Simpson and his wife, Tammy, had one daughter, Hilary, now seven. Now they also have a 4-year-old son, Alec.

Simpson found that the principles he learned not only made sense, but they also were consistent with the way he wanted to bring up his children.

"(Savory) talked about setting some goals," so I listened to that and I came home and I told my wife and I grabbed Hilary and said our lives are going to change and they're going to change now!"

Pasture is part of Simpson's simplified lifestyle. Here cows graze in one paddock while the white pens house the pasture chickens that follow along behind.

He was still not sure about the path he would take, however. He decided to venture off on his own and quit milking cows for three and a half years. To earn a living, he hit the road trimming hooves, assisting with cow sales, and working for other people at shows. He also spent some time working the night shift in a factory. His wife has always worked full time, so their lives became more hectic with Simpson not home a good deal of the time and the bills weren't being paid without the milk money.

"So then you start making decisions surrounding what your real goals are, and my goal was to be home. To be here." One of the fundamental tools of holism is grazing, so he decided to put the cows to work rather than making a substantial investment in machinery.

"Your tools to harvest forage can either be a cow or a machine, so I got started in my enterprise pretty much with no equipment. The only reason I could start this enterprise is because Dad sold me the farm, cheap, according to land values."

Because the land values on the books were higher than the actual purchase price, Simpson had equity to start his business.

He built a step-up parlor and added fencing to the farm so he could manage the grazers. In total, he invested $28,000 in remodeling the barn, buying the pipeline and bulk tank, receiver units, gates, stalls and everything he needed. He hopes the investment will last many years with minimum repair.

"The bottom line is you turn solar energy that goes into the grass into the cow. It's the cheapest way to make milk and make money, so you can be home and stay with your family. That's one of the big things. I don't worry about production. I worry about making profits and it doesn't necessarily have to come from a cow.

"My goals, as far as profit is concerned, say, I want profit from the land first. In order to get profit from the land I need something to harvest. And what are your best margins?"

Not only did Simpson shift feeding techniques, he also became a seasonal producer and has added different breeds to his herd.

"Cows calve in the spring the same time the grass starts growing, the deer have their babies, the bees start working. Everything starts happening in the spring. Up here we definitely have to work with nature. I'm at 1,700 feet elevation and it makes a lot of difference in the growing degree days. Going seasonal, I try to plan it so the cows will have peak production when there's peak grass growth," Simpson said.

Last year Simpson had a 72 pound average at peak production. He fed a 5:1 milk-to-grain ratio on top of the grass.

To help manage the pasture, Simpson and his helper, Marty Fisher, use a pasture gauge to measure the grass in the various paddocks. When the cows are going to a certain paddock the grass has been measured to determine the amount of dry matter in that particular area. They also keep track of the bulk tank. If a paddock does not have enough dry matter for an entire day, Simpson will move them to another area.

(Turn to Page 14)

Seven-year-old Hilary preps a cow in the step-up parlor. When the cows are milked, the headlock is released and the cow walks straight through. Simpson notes that the low dollar investment in the actual parlor helped him realize a profit in the operation sooner.

8500 SERIES SMALL SQUARE BALER

HOLD ON TO MORE HIGH-PROTEIN LEAVES WITH THE CENTER-LINE DESIGN

With a Case IH 8500 Series Small Square Baler, your hay has a straight shot through the baler From pickup to bale chute, all Case IH balers feature the field-proven center-line design.

Other baler designs force hay to change directions or turn corners, which can cause leaves to shake off or tear loose, taking your feed value along with them Fortuantely, the center-line design on Case IH balers helps your hay hang on to more of its protein rich leaves, giving you bales with more nutrition

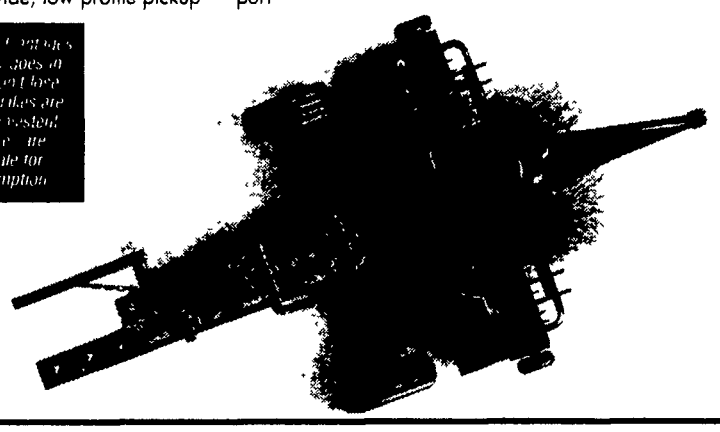
Here's how your hay becomes a solid bale built to stack like a brick Hay enters the wide, low-profile pickup and meets plenty of crop-hungry tines Then centering augers gently feed it to the prepacker chamber Hay is swept in by a stuffer fork and compressed into a uniform flake

Next the preformed bale flake enters the bale chamber just ahead of the plunger Each charge of the heavy duty plunger makes one flake until a square-cornered bale is built

The result? Bales of consistent density and shape that pack a powerful nutritional payload And you get rock-solid bales built for better stacking, storage and transport

From [illegible] of a center-line design (8545 shown) Hay goes in the same direction it comes out so you don't lose any protein-packed leaves And the bales are preformed for uniformity every bale is consistent in size shape and density Better yet leaves are more evenly distributed throughout the bale for uniform curing and improved feed consumption

Unlike off-set balers the center-line Case IH [illegible] tires on both sides of the bale This [illegible] distribution to reduce compaction in your fields For an even smoother ride add [illegible] flotation tires



SMALL 14X18 BALES...BIG CASE IH QUALITY

From the smallest 8520 to the medium-duty 8530 and the deluxe 8545, Case IH offers you three choices in the 14x18 in (36x46 cm) bale category

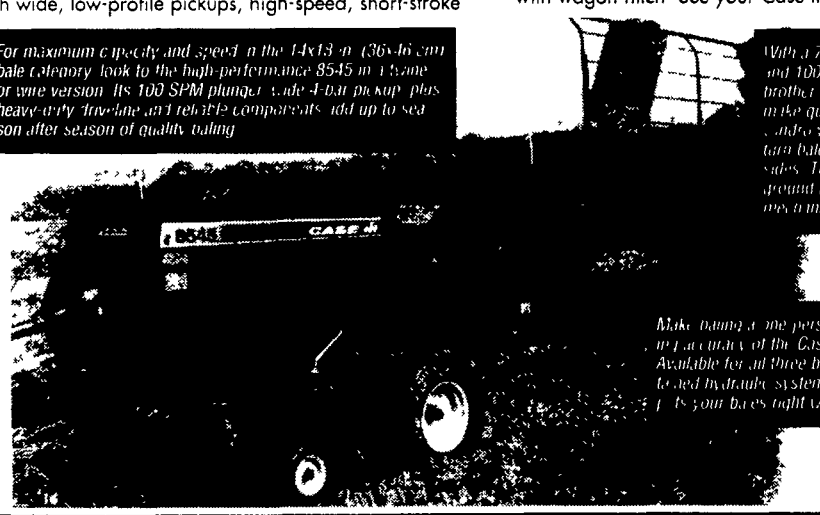
All models boast the advantages of a center-line design It's a difference you'll quickly see in consistent bale quality as you get bale after bale of solid, stackable, tied to-last bales

These three models of balers get the job done right with wide, low-profile pickups, high-speed, short-stroke plungers, constant-velocity drivelines, and reliable knotters and twisters A big-capacity twine box boosts productivity, while a standard bale counter tracks the day's progress

Optional features include hydraulic density control, high-flotation tires, hydraulic pickup lift, wire tie version of the 8545, light kit for night baling, quarter-turn bale chute, the 8511 Bale Thrower, and a bale chute extension with wagon hitch See your Case IH dealer for full details

For maximum capacity and speed in the 14x18 in (36x46 cm) bale category look to the high-performance 8545 in twine or wire version Its 100 SPM plunger wide 4-bar pickup plus heavy-duty driveline and reliable components add up to season after season of quality baling

With a 7 5 ft (2 3 m) wide pickup and 100 SPM plunger like its bigger brother the big-hungry 8530 can make quick work of your widest windrows Add an optional quarter-turn bale chute to set bales on their sides This keeps twine off the ground and positions bales for easy mechanical retrieval



Make baling a one person job with the wagon-hitch accuracy of the Case IH 8511 Bale Thrower Available for all three baler models this self-contained hydraulic system with diamond tread belts [illegible] your bales right where you want them

This new Baler Model 8575 just arrived, which we purchased before the price increase and we will pass the savings on to you! 1000 lb dry bale weight, capable for high moisture baling, 31 5"x34 4" chamber with adjustable bale length up to 98", automatic density control, center lube system, roller bale chute Buy Quality - Buy Case IH! Council Honors Graziers, Industry Leaders At Banquet

GRANTVILLE (Dauphin Co.) — Forage producers, graziers, and agri-industry representatives were honored early in March here at the Holiday Inn during the 39th Annual Meeting of the Pennsylvania Forage and Grassland Council (PFGC).

The PFGC Special Award, the highest recognition given by PFGC, was presented to Dr. Larry Muller of the Dairy and Animal Science Department at Penn State.

The award, presented to an individual or company that has made a major contribution direction to the PFGC and to the state's forage and livestock industry, honors Muller for his contribution to quality forage in the dairy ration. Muller has secured funding and coordinated the Regionally Based Professional Development Program for Grazing Systems Management Program. This program, according to Dr. Marvin Hall, Penn State forage specialist, provided in-depth grazing and pasture training for industry and agency employees throughout Pennsylvania and the Northeast.

"Dr. Muller was also instrumental in establishing the Grazing Research and Education Center at Penn State," noted Hall. "This center, along with PFGC, assists in planning and sponsoring the Pennsylvania Grazing and Forage Conference each year."

A PFGC Special Award for forage and grazing contributions to the industry was presented to Larry Muller, Penn State Dairy and Animal Science Department, left, at the Pennsylvania Grazing and Forage Conference. Paul Craig presented the award.

The field days and meetings are supplemented with presentations on a variety of related topics presented by farmers, businesses, lending agencies, and government agencies.

Stockum's involvement in Project Grass has brought together many diverse groups and organizations and stimulated better cooperation toward the goal of conservation farming.

The Conservation Farmer Award recipients are Lewis and Harold Welch, who have implemented numerous conservation practices on their dairy in Wayne County. They have incorporated intensive grazing into their forage system to maximize permanent ground cover and minimize erosion.

The Welches have also installed a liquid manure pond so that they can store manure until the soil conditions are suitable for application. They have been very cooperative with their cooperative extension and soil conservation offices by hosting field days and tours of their farm and conservation practices.

Outstanding Pasture Producer awards were presented to those producers who exemplify progressive, industry recognized methods of grazing and forage production on their farms. Outstanding Pasture Producer Award winners include:

Council Honors Graziers, Industry Leaders At Banquet

• George Kepple, Armstrong County. Kepple owns and operates the premiere rotation grazing system in Armstrong County, according to Hall. Kepple developed and implemented the grazing system after extensively reading about and observing other rotational grazing systems. He is always willing to host field days on his farm and take time to share his ideas with other farmers. He recently spoke to the Armstrong Conservation District and the Farm Service Agency on the benefits of rotational grazing. An Armstrong County district attorney, Kepple's "dedication to rotational grazing and environmental protection along with his willingness to help other farmers makes George Kepple deserving of the award," noted Hall.

• Greg and Deb Farr, Columbia County. The Farrs operate a rotational grazed cow/calf herd. Their grazing operation has evolved over time into an exceptional example of outstanding grazing, noted Hall. The changes in their grazing system have come from their involvement in educational programs as both students and teachers and research and demonstration projects on their farm. Some of the projects include pasture accumulation rates, alternative pasture species, and altering rotation periods for optimum production. The Farrs have also hosted educational meetings and field days on their farm.

• Titus Martin, Franklin County. Martin milks 90 cows on his rotational grazed farm in Franklin County. Martin began converting his 145-acre farm over to pastures and rotational grazing in 1992. It has been a continual process for Titus, said Hall, as he learns new things and experiments with them on his farm before he adopts them. Martin turns the cows into a new paddock after each milking. He has a herd average of more than 19,000 pounds per year. Martin has stabilized the cattle laneways to minimize erosion and to make it easier for the cows going to and coming from the pastures. Martin was instrumental in starting and continues to be a driving force in the Franklin County Graziers group. He is actively involved in many farm organizations and is a strong advocate of grazing in Pennsylvania, Hall said.

• Duane and June Hertzler, Perry County. The Hertzlers milk 150 Holsteins on their 320-acre farm. Prior to 1994, they grew corn and alfalfa on all their cropland, plus 400-500 acres of rented land. In 1994, they decided to go into intensive grazing. Since then they have converted all of the land (275 acres) to intensive grazing. A few of the changes they have made since converting are installed shale laneways, a portable water system to provide water in all paddocks, fenced streams, installed cattle crossings, and increase use of movable polywire fence for improved management of pastures and cows. "Duane and June have also been very cooperative in hosting field days on their farm, and sharing their experiences with others," Hall said. Duane spoke at this year's conference.

• Lewis and Ben Hawley, Susquehanna County. The Hawleys seasonally milk 75 cows on their 140-acre grazing operation. The cows freshen in the spring to match the pasture season and are milked in a newly constructed double-10 parlor. The Hawleys have implemented numerous practices to improve their pasture and herd management. They continue to focus on optimizing pasture production and utilization to increase animal performance. Their farm recently received the Dairy of Distinction and Conservation Farmer of the Year awards.

WINTER SNOW IS BENEFICIAL TO FORAGES

Marvin Hall
Penn State Forage Specialist

The snow this winter was an annoyance for those of us who had to shovel it or travel in it. However, the forages loved it!

It was just what they needed to increase their chances of surviving the winter and being productive next summer.

How does snow help forages survive the winter? Let's use alfalfa as an example to demonstrate how this works.

If the alfalfa plant has properly hardened for the winter (increased sucrose and decreased water in the root cells), its crown and roots can withstand temperatures as low as 5 degrees F. This temperature may alarm you since air temperatures are frequently lower than this. Fortunately the snow works as a layer of insulation and protects the roots and crown from extremely cold air temperatures. This is why winters with little snow cover (therefore little insulation from extreme fluctuations in temperature) are very hard on alfalfa persistence. Last winter is an excellent example of this occurring throughout much of the state.

"The paddocks are variable. Not all of them are the same size. This is such a hilly farm and a wet farm that different areas mature at different times," Simpson said.

To supplement the cows over the winter months or in case of severe weather, Simpson makes hay from the lush spring growth. He also buys TMR to supplement the cows, if needed.

He machine hires most of the work that involves equipment and is able to rent his father's equipment for mowing hay or hauling manure out of the holding pen. He also rents additional ground from his father to graze his 32 cows and 17 bred heifers.

"As far as equipment investment, I have a four-wheeler and a cart," said Simpson.

Seasonal production can also be tricky to maintain, often leading to higher cull rates than Simpson would like to have.

"The first year I had a 40 percent cull rate and we milked 90 percent 2-year-olds that I had started two years previously," he said. "I'm learning. There are lots of mistakes to be made. That's part of the reason I'm playing so much with the genetics. I'm trying to fit an animal to the environment I live in. We need a cow to go out and harvest in all kinds of conditions, no matter if its hot, cold, whatever," he said.

This year he estimates a 25 percent cull rate on cows and plans for a 90 percent conception rate on heifers to be bred for next season. He uses a herd sire because he was having difficulty settling the cows with artificial insemination to keep them on the seasonal schedule.

"Any cows not due by the 15th of June are gone," he said.

Thankfully, he notes that most of the cows he culled went for dairy purposes.

With grazing, Simpson also sees a tremendous improvement in the health of the herd, especially the feet.

"My vet bill for all of 1998 was $675," he said.

Cows aren't the only livestock that nibble grass at Simpson's farm.

He also raises pasture poultry on his 170-acre farm, where he calls 80 acres grazable land.

The meat chickens are in pens and the pens are moved around the farm either in front of or behind the cows, depending on the height of the grass. He processes the birds on the farm and has developed several strong markets in the area. Every year he raises and butchers five batches of birds which he markets for $1.45 per pound.

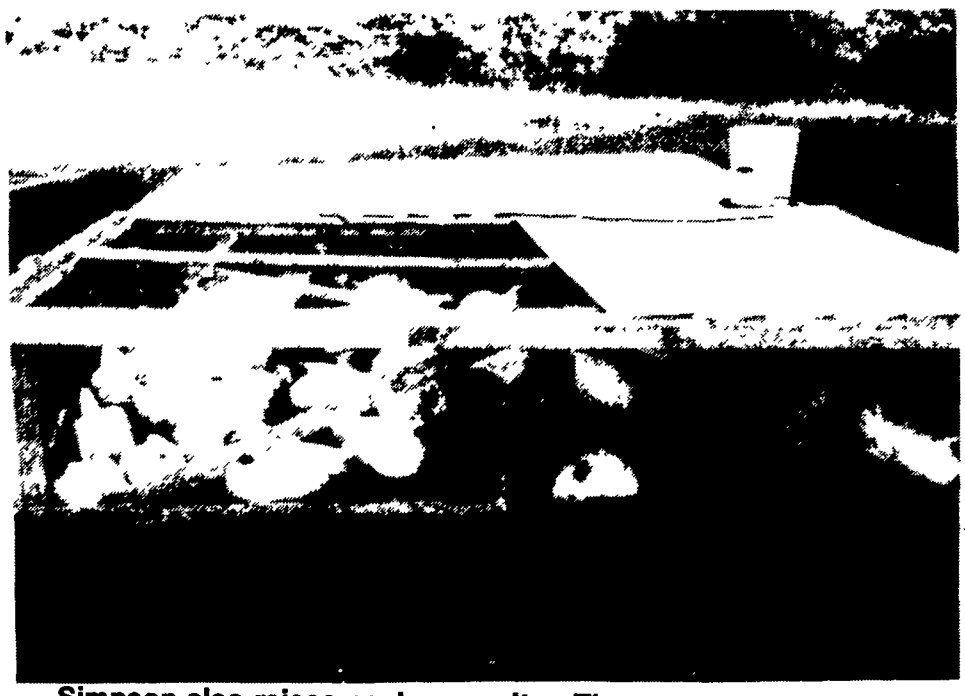
The poultry also help fertilize the fields resulting in better grass growth.

Things can get pretty hectic at the farm in the spring months when all the calves are coming, the new batch of chickens arrives, and the hay needs to be cut, but Simpson says he loves the work.

"All the cows calve at once, so you deal with that. The chickens come at the same time into the brooder barns. But the calves all get fed milk for a certain period of time and they're all weaned in a 30-day period, so there's no more calf feeding. They all get dehorned, vaccinated all at the same time because they're all the same age, and it makes the management of this stuff so much easier," he explained. "I love spring and I feel like working in spring."

(Turn to Page 15)

The Simpsons also keep several layers on their farm to supply the family with fresh eggs.



Simpson also raises pasture poultry. The pens are moved around the pasture to provide plenty of feed for the chickens. Simpson raises and butchers five groups per season.

Each Pasture Pefect™ Mixture must contain at least 70% improved varieties. Improved varieties are defined as varieties in their species classification in the fields of palatability, feed value, digestibility, and/or yield. Varieties must have results proven by independent testing agencies.

Varieties must be suited to grazing. Pasture Perfect™ Mixes contain varieties that have proven to be well fit for grazing. Many mixes can be used for hay production as well, but this criterion ensures graze-ability.

Frustrated With Conventional Farming, Grazier Employs New Ideas

He plans to dry the cows off as a group toward the end of December, although this year he milked a little longer to take advantage of the higher milk prices. During the months the cows are dry, Simpson does extensive planning. Everything starts up again in March.

On grazing, Simpson notes that we're not reinventing the wheel — grazing has always been done. He proves his point with a quote from a 1939 Mansfield Merchant newspaper.

"On the front page of the Mansfield Merchant, in June 1939, there was a notice to farmers that said, 'Farmers, spread lime and rock phosphate and graze your cows, it's the cheapest way!'" he said. Today's technology makes grazing easier than ever, with high tensile fence and other products.

Even though Simpson enjoys being there for his family and taking care of his farm, he will always love hitting the road to judge cattle.

"My father graduated from Cornell in 1959 and, from then on, worked different jobs. Dad won his college judging contest when he was at Cornell, and 20 years later I won mine at Alfred State College. I judge all breeds and I have all breeds, or a mixture, except for Milking Shorthorn," said Simpson.

Simpson's goal is to leave a positive legacy for his children.

"My children are going to be raised in a situation where we look at the land first for every resource available to us," he said. "Our goal is to stay here and work the land. What are the guys going to do when there's no more fuel? You've got to look at your resources."

Pasture poultry was Simpson's initial pasture enterprise. Here he instructs some young children how to dress a chicken.

ARE YOU GETTING THE MOST FROM YOUR HAYLAGE, HIGH MOISTURE CORN AND SILAGE?

You should use Animal Medic's Forage Inoculants because:

- They can stimulate fermentation - quicker preservation - less heating - less loss of nutrients!
- Improve nutritional value of ensiled forage - you keep more of the nutrients that you started out with!
- Insure the presence of sufficient numbers of Lactic Acid producing bacteria! These bacteria take sugars from your forage and produce lactic acid, thereby lowering the pH to a level where the forage is preserved. Native bacteria (the bacteria that may be on your forage at cutting) can be less efficient since it produces lactic acid, carbon dioxide and ethanol. With native bacteria the fermentation process can take too long to lower the pH to a preserved level, where all the plant sugars are used and then they start breaking down proteins producing ammonia which raises pH and you end up with a problem!
- They are sold with our Money Back Satisfaction Guarantee!

PFGC ❖ INDUSTRY CORNER ❖

TRIALS — YOU GOTTA HAVE SOME!

Jonathan Rupert
Product Development Manager
Ampac Seed

Yes, another spring has quickly come upon us. It will be full of trials and tribulations, this much is promised. And this year, not unlike many years gone by, you walk through the pastures quietly asking yourself questions, such as:

"Is there something I can plant that will do a better job than what I've got?"

"Can I get a variety that will really 'up' my milk production?"

"Maybe I should plant some of those new clovers. I wonder if they will survive here?"

"Will the cows eat that festulolium stuff, or whatever it's called?"

"I wonder if those new endophyte-free tall fescues are more palatable? Would they help in the summers?"

"Are tetraploid ryegrasses better than diploid?"

"Nothing seems to grow on the hilltop — am I fertililzing too heavy? Too little?"

Staring down at your toes you notice that your pasture is a mix of grasses, weeds, clovers, and other miscellaneous plants. Some of it you planted, some of it was already there, and some of it must have come in that hay you bought from Maryland last summer — 'cause no one around has seen anything like that stuff. Too bad the cows won't eat it, since it sure grows good!

Up at the University, they've been trialing some interesting varieties, but they don't have the same kind of soil as you do. Besides, those are hay trials anyway; and you're a grazer. Then all those seed companies are promoting new varieties; some not even having local trial information. Some say seed is better from Holland, others better from New Zealand, others say it doesn't matter. What's a person to believe?

The questions you ponder are good questions, the type of questions farmers have asked hundreds of times before. My guess is if you're reading this article, you must have finally stopped staring at your boots and come inside. I wonder, what did you decide?

Did you come in excited or dismayed? How will you answer these questions?

Well, first of all, let me assure you, your questions deserve answers. Furthermore, many of the answers are at your fingertips.

How, you ask?

The answer is simple. Conduct your own trials! Now, don't get me wrong, I am not encouraging you to doubt everything you hear and throw away all faith in others. Rather, I am suggesting that your own trials are just one way of helping you make wiser and more accurate decisions regarding the seeds you plant.

Think about how you make some other decisions. Have you ever bought a tractor without first test-driving it? Without seeing how it pulls some implements? What about a horse? Do you buy such things sight-un-seen?

Probably not. Fortunately, most of what we buy is clearly visible and functional — ready to look at, judge, and evaluate, before we open our wallets.

Not so with seeds, They are morphological — like a caterpillar and a butterfly. What you plant becomes something else other than a seed — that is, grass, legume, or grain. Buying seed is better compared to acquiring something invisible, like advice. Much of the advice we get is free, and some we pay for, like a lawyer. But for my illustration, simply consider the similarities between seed and advice:

- Both are of little value if not used.
- Some seed and some advice are not altogether bad, but don't necessarily fit a particular situation.
- Bad advice, like bad seed, will produce a bad crop.
- But good advice, like good seed, will be unfruitful if improperly managed.
- It's rather foolish to keeping going back and getting advice that isn't helpful. So too with seed.
- Advice, albeit good, may seem rather strange and untried. Like seed, it should be applied cautiously and under a watchful eye.
- A wise person is one who is willing to receive advice, yet be able to only apply that which is deemed good. Likewise, a good farmer will consider new and different seeds, and by application learn what works best for his farm.

My desire is for you to really know what works and what doesn't work on your farm. I'm not talking about plowing the farm up every time a new variety hits the streets, nor am I promoting skepticism. Rather, let's consider some real, practical, inexpensive ways to become our own evaluators. We will do this by considering three operations.

Join me for a little walk into three unique and very different pastures. We will be visiting a large dairy, a hobby dairy goat ranch, and a medium-size sheep grazing operation.

VanBeek Dairy

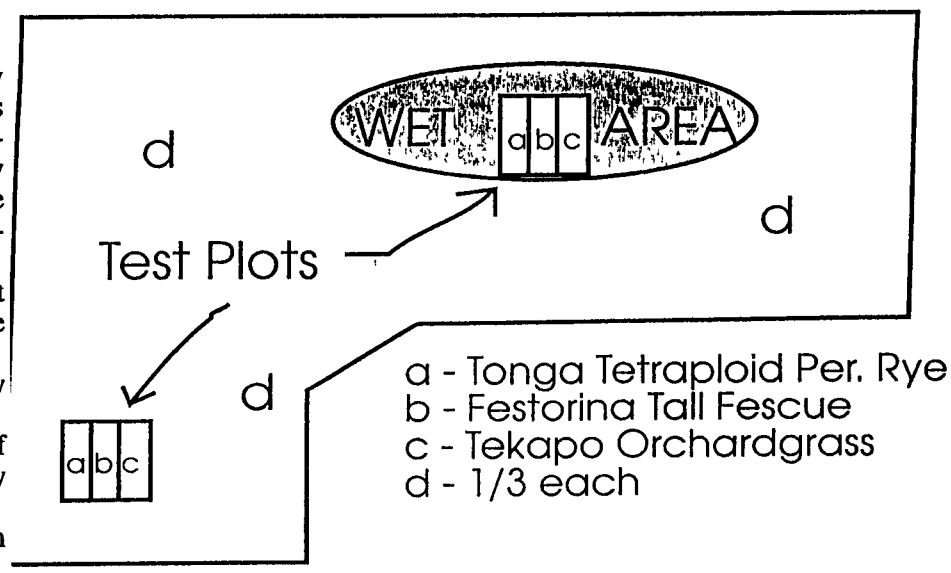
Martin VanBeek is a second generation dairyman in Belfountain, Ore. His family's confinement operation milks about 900+ head a day. In the 300 surrounding acres, Martin has been raising corn silage and cover cropping with annual ryegrass screenings he obtained free from a neighboring grass seed farmer. He has been doing this for years. Until this last fall, that is.

After a bit of number crunching, discussions with his animal nutritionist, and talking to his local seed salesman, Martin believes he has found a better use for his 300 acres. He doesn't want to graze, but thinks that some of the new improved forages will give him better silage for his money and effort, rather than annually working his ground. It can be quite wet in some springs, and he is always fighting the weather.

Martin is also facing some water quality issues from the Department of Environmental Quality. He is under pressure to minimize effluent runoff. A permanent stand of grass may be the solution.

Martin elected to plant a simple three-component mix: ⅓ each tetraploid perennial ryegrass, grazing orchardgrass, and endophyte-free tall fescue. In addition, Martin chose two "plot areas" in which he seeded each of the varieties separately. Martin can get quite a bit of standing water in some of the lowlands, so one area is in the wettest spot. The other area is in a place that represents the majority of his land. Martin then seeded each of the plot areas with one replication of the individual varieties and seeded the remainder of the 300 acres with the full mixture (see Diagram 1).

Diagram 1 - VanBeek Dairy



In a very short time, Martin will be able to judge the performance of the mixture, and identify the following:

- What variety does best in the wet area?
- What variety does best in the dry area?
- Which one performs best for each cutting?
- How do these varieties compare in maturity?

His plots are also big enough (about ½ acre each) for him to easily judge relative tonnage, sample for feed value, and much more. Since information gathered about the mix as a whole can be compared to the individual varieties at any given time to determine an array of information. More than likely, many other facts will also come to light. Then Martin can take his information and act upon it.

Say, for instance, he finds his wet area is just too much for the orchardgrass, but the ryegrass is holding up great. Well, Martin can overseed some more ryegrass into the whole wet area.

Here's another example. If the mix is down in yield mid-summer, and the fescue plots are noticeably exceeding the other plots, Martin will know that if he is to increase summer yields he may need to plant more fescue. We haven't even addressed the possible evaluations of nitrogen uptake from manure water or a host of other conclusions these trials will give Martin. But you get the picture. A simple mix, plus a few plots of the individual components is an easy source to invaluable information for the VanBeeks.

By the way, I was out at Martin's the second week of March. I have never seen his dairy look so pretty as it does now. And to think it will look so nice for years.

The Rupert Ranch

My small hobby farm is host to a small but growing herd of dairy goats. Past fall, I wanted to experiment with overseeding to learn more about the benefits of annual tetraploids vs. perennial tetraploids. I divided one acre into six strips and overseeded as shown in Diagram 2.

Cost? Three bags of seed and a couple hours on a Saturday.

DIAGRAM 2 - RUPERT RANCH

Abundant Annual Ryegrass

Abundant/Tonga

Tonga Perennial Ryegrass

NO CHANGE

Abundant Annual Ryegrass

Abundant/Tonga

Tonga Perennial Ryegrass

Benefits? First, I added seed — seed that will turn into grass, grass which will improve my pasture density and available feed. (By the way, this is of utmost non-research importance, because my two daughters have almost got me convinced to buy a horse . . . and you know what they do to pastures!)

Second, I will learn some important answers to questions such as:

- How much faster will annual grow compared to perennial?
- How much longer will perennial last than annual?
- Will the combination of the two be better than either individually?
- Will the animals prefer one over the other?
- Did overseeding pay for itself, or should I have done nothing at all?

Look at that last question again. It is a very important question. Always, always keep some of your old pasture around to compare with the new. By evaluating the old to the new you will be able to determine a great deal more than if you completely revamp the old.

Third, I committed myself mentally to checking out my pasture more often. Over and over again, I hear profitable grazers reminding one another to get out and walk their fields. The direct benefits of this are enormous and usually obvious.

Well, in addition to the great direct value of seeing how your pastures are performing, I have discovered that such attention will result in what I refer to as "hidden benefits." For instance, the day I started writing this article, I went out and examined my plots. While staring at my grass, one of my momma goats stole my attention. Soon, I found myself on all fours watching her vigorously graze on spring grass. Know what I discovered? I discovered that she can really chomp up a storm! Of course, while I was down on all four, her 10-day-old kid kept trying to jump on my back!

But then, another distraction and the greatest discovery of the day: I found a new place to hang a tree swing for my girls. Yes, these are but a few of the hidden benefits yet to be discovered by many a farmer who has checked out of the pasture rather than checking out the pasture!

Back to my trials. My curiosity on clovers and legumes gave me the incentive to add a twist to the test plots. You see, I wanted to evaluate particular varieties of ladino and red clover, as well as birdsfoot trefoil. Also, I wanted to learn how they would boost the ryegrasses as compared to applying commercial fertilizer. So around the first of March, I took the same area and cross-seeded as shown in Diagram 3, with a grand finale of a diagonal strip of fertilizer to cross all plots.

Cost? Oh, another few small bags of seed. Benefits? Same as the above three with additional answers to these questions (actually, many more than the ones listed, but maybe that's because I like to ask lots of questions!):

- Which will come up fastest; birdsfoot, ladino, or red clover?
- Will the mixtures be complimentary?
- Animal preference?
- Seasonal preference?
- Nitrogen benefit difference?
- Affect on the annual compared to the perennial?
- Did the fertilizer benefit the clovers significantly?

I have studied more trial data than you would care to know. But the reality is, I cannot know exactly how trial data relates to me and my operation until I apply it under my own management. (More than likely, I am going to do a poorer job than the universities, so I need better varieties!)

Chuck Cavaleres' Dekalb County Sheep Operation

I met Chuck at the Great Lakes Grazing Conference this year. Chuck told me he was working on a project to determine the feasibility of raising sheep in a part of the world that revolves around corn and soybeans (northern Illinois).

Taking corn 'n bean ground and putting sheep on it? Sound like something out of a fairy tale!

Anyway, as part of Chuck's project, he was going to overseed a 2-year-old stand of alfalfa with orchardgrass. He also had four acres to overseed with red clover. He wanted to know if our company could supply him the orchardgrass and red clover.

Fortunately, Chuck and I hit it off real quick. I talked to him about considering evaluating more than just one clover and one orchardgrass. And after a few discussions, Chuck's plans

VICON'S KMR Trailed Mower Conditioners

A superb cut with excellent conditioning performance. Available in 7'10", 9'2", 10', 10'6" and 12'6" widths, Vicon is once again "Bringing Technology down to earth."

- Full swivel hitch - PTO stays in alignment when cutting square corners.
- "Free Float" suspension system - With 16" of free stroke in operating position, the cutterbar follows uneven ground and clears obstacles The center hinge point also permits the mower unit to raise or lower at either side without adding excess pressure on the opposite side. The high-lift design gives swath clearance at headlands.

* Wedge shaped cutterbar - Less ground resistance, eliminates "bulldozing" in soft ground conditions, and allows for a lower cutting height when needed.
* 3 Blades per disc - Vicon's patented design puts 1/3 less load on each blade and an even load on the drive train
* Top service hubs on cutterbar - Easy Maintenance.
* Labyrinth seals - A specially designed labyrinth seal on the hub of each disc prevents dirt, moisture, and all foreign material from entering.
* Full protected cutterbar - Cutterbar is supported completely with an extra shell and additional wear strips. A reinforcement rod stiffens the cutterbar to prevent flexing.
* Segmented intermeshing fully adjustable conditioning rolls.
* Adjustable formed swath doors for fluffy, easy to pick-up windrows.

got more complicated . . . and valuable. Chuck eventually decided to plant the whole project into 1+ acre test plots. He is now going to evaluate 12 different grass seed formulations and four different clover formulations (Diagram 4).

Why? So he will be able to provide information both on the overall profitability for grazing sheep in northern Illinois, and how profitability is affected by what a farmer plants. I consider this valuable information.

Chuck's scenario allows for fixed paddocks of 1.6 acres each. He will be able to determine palatability, growth rate, forage yield, etc. of two orchardgrass, three ryegrasses, two clovers, one festulolium, and eight combinations of these varieties. He will do this with nominal risk. If some seem to not perform, he may need to replant portions of those paddocks.

Is it worth the risk? Chuck thought so. There are many others throughout the world who have taken such a risk. They have also benefited greatly from their efforts.

DON'T TRY THIS AT HOME

Remember that saying? Well, it doesn't apply to experimenting with different seeds. If this article has stirred your inquiring mind at all, please consider some final thoughts:

- Fear of failure prevents many from trying something new. Trial plots can minimize your risk down to near zero, freeing you up to make safe and profitable changes.
- Don't generalize too much about a species by the performance of a single variety. Potomac orchardgrass is not a fair indicator of all other orchardgrasses.
- Like advice, apply your results. If it works in the plots, take your successes to the rest of the farm.
- Many seed companies are more than willing to participate in your trials. "Ye have not because ye ask not."
- When you do your trials, get some other farmers to do the same thing. That way, you will be able to compare your finding together, sharing successes, failures, questions, and just plain friendship. Never forget the "hidden values!"
- Always keep a little bit of the old unchanged pasture in. If available, seed some of the old mix in a plot next to the new mixes. This will be your guide. It will help you judge things such as the effect of winter kill be your guide. It will help you judge things such as the effect of winter kill, drought tolerance, feed value, forage yield, etc. Essentially, it will answer the question, "What did I gain?"
- Document the 3 Ws. What did I plant? Where did I plant it? When did I plant? Marking is great. You don't have to be elaborate, just enough to know what you did.
- Grasses clearly respond differently to different levels of nitrogen. If you are putting in a few varieties side by side, consider going the opposite way with a few different fertilization levels. This is easier with long plots as compared to square plots.
- If you find something unique about a variety, good or bad, contact the company who sold you the seed and ask them to explain the uniqueness. More than likely, you will both learn.
- We have only discussed different types of seeds. The same evaluation methods should be considered for fertilizing, grazing rotations, cutting times, and a myriad of other variables. After all, aren't the variables what makes farming fun?

Life is full of trials, not many, though, by choice. But all will produce a good crop of answers. And, on your farm, there will come many a trial. So why not add another one?

I just looked out the window thinking about what I was going to write about in this issue of Foraging Around. I see that it is still raining and water is running down the window.

I realized that we often take water for granted in our everyday lives. It is a very precious and essential element of life but oftentimes we do not become concerned with that fact until there is none available.

When you think about water and its availability in a grazing system, most livestock producers have many choices to make concerning how, where, and when they will provide it. Let's think about those choices and what factors need to be considered in making those choices.

First choice is where to provide water for your livestock. More specifically I am thinking that you need to decide if you are going to put water in each paddock or to provide it at a central water facility.

There are a few things to consider in making this first choice. First is, what class of livestock are you dealing with? A beef herd or lactating dairy herd should make a big impact on your decision. There is no question if you should have water in the paddock for the lactating dairy cow — the question is can you afford not to do it? Water is the cheapest feed you can give your cows to make milk and having an available supply of good, clean water in the paddock is the best way to give it to them.

In addition to making milk, the fact that the trough is in the paddock gives most dairy farmers the option of using smaller troughs. As a rule, only one or two cows will go for a drink at time when it is in the paddock; however, if one cow leaves the paddock to go to water, the rest will follow and then you need a large volume of water to meet their needs. They will also consume more water in a typical day if it is more readily available to them.

Providing water in every paddock to produce more milk is not as critical with the lactating beef cow, but consider this fact — if you have water in every paddock, do you need to have as good a laneway system for the beef cow herd? The answer is probably no if you do not need to go to the paddocks routinely with equipment. Then the money you would spend on laneways could be used to provide the water system and maintain it.

Secondly, we need to think about the source of our water supply. Two considerations associated with the supply are quality and quantity. Most folks think about the quantity part, because it is important to have enough water to meet the livestock's need for the entire grazing season. The quality aspect is often overlooked and generally never considered.

I am going to provide you with some documented evidence that quality of water can and does make a difference in animal performance.

A dairy farmer and his son who are grazing a herd of Holsteins in Wayne County have water available in every paddock. The water source is the only thing that changes from paddock to paddock. The cows were moved from a paddock that had a spring as the source of water to a paddock that had a pond as the source of water. The 50 lactating cows dropped a total of 364 pounds of milk in one day and stayed there until the third day, when their production level returned to almost normal and they were back on the spring water. This same trend was repeated in three grazing cycles in 1997 and also in 1998. This points out that it was not the availability of water but the quality of the water provided that caused the drop in milk production. I would tell you from this and other data that water quality is as important as quantity.

Once you decide that you want to put water in every paddock, it is important that you choose a system that can supply the quantity of water that the livestock will demand. To deliver that water you need to put together the components that will transfer the water from the source to the trough or tub the livestock will drink from.

There are many types of pumps or devices that will move the water. They all move water — the difference is basically the form of energy that is used in doing the pumping. There are pumps that run on solar-collected direct current, alternating current, wind power, kinetic energy from flowing water in a stream or from a spring flow, or are operated as a result of energy supplied by the livestock that are drinking. Every situation needs to be evaluated to determine which pump will do the job.

Based on the pump selected, you can choose the size of the pipe that will deliver the water to the livestock.

The last decision that needs to be made is the type and size of the trough, the number of troughs needed, and their location. As we discussed earlier, you can use a smaller trough if water is available in the paddock; however, that is not the only consideration that goes into the size of the trough. The number of livestock, type of livestock, and flow delivery or recharge rate of the trough are important sizing considerations.

The recharge rate of the trough is the most important factor in sizing the trough in my estimation. It is the valve that controls the recharge if the pump and pipe are sized properly to service the system. To use a small trough, you need to be able to deliver water to the trough at a rate faster than it will be consumed.

If your pipe system delivers eight gallons per minute, but you install a valve that delivers three gallons per minute, then the system is limited by the flow rate of the valve and you have to consider a larger trough to handle the demands and provide a reserve supply for the livestock. I recommend paying the cost of the valve that will give you high volume flows and consider using a smaller trough.

There are many factors that go into the design and installation of a watering system. We have briefly discussed many of them, but you need to think about your goals and objectives associated with your grazing system.

I think most of you will be profit-motivated and the availability of a reliable, high quality water supply is very essential is helping to maximize those profits. If you need additional information or assistance to evaluate your watering needs or to design and install a system-contact your local Natural Resources Conservation Service office, county cooperative extension office, or conservation district office to get that help.

PFGC ❖ SPECIAL REPORT ❖

MANAGING POTATO LEAFHOPPER

Dr. Dennis Calvin
Penn State Forage Specialist

While some new alfalfa varieties offer resistance to the potato leafhopper, most varieties do not so managing leafhoppers remains very important in producing alfalfa in Pennsylvania. As spring approaches, warm air will begin to move into the northeast and bring with it spring showers. These spring showers that originate in the Gulf of Mexico can also bring the potato leafhopper.

The potato leafhopper is a migratory insect that overwinters in states along the Gulf of Mexico. It cannot survive the cold winter conditions and then fly into updrafts created by strong storms systems developing in the Gulf of Mexico. The insects are drawn into the storm system and carried hundreds of miles north and eastward. Computer simulations of storm movement have predicted that potato leafhoppers can move from the Gulf of Mexico to Pennsylvania in as little as five days.

By understanding this behavior of the potato leafhopper, its arrival into Pennsylvania can be anticipated. In the spring, beginning around late April, major storms from the Gulf of Mexico begin to move north and east into Pennsylvania. The frequency and intensity of these storm fronts influence the timing and number of leafhoppers reaching the northeast United States.

In years when few storms arrive early, the arrival of leafhopper is later and the numbers arriving are lower, resulting in reduced pressure from the insect. Under these conditions, only a few second cutting alfalfa field typically need an insecticide application. However, the numbers build-up during the second cutting and a greater number of third cutting field require an insecticide application. In years when early spring storms originating in the Gulf of Mexico are frequent, potato leafhoppers in general arrive earlier and damage from the insect is greater. Under these conditions many second and third cutting alfalfa fields require an insecticide application to prevent damage.

As the second cutting of alfalfa reaches about 2 to 4 inches in height, scout the field once a week. If a storm has just moved through the area there is a good chance that new leafhoppers have moved into the field. Arriving leafhoppers prefer the new regrowth before it takes on the dark-blue green color of maturing alfalfa. The wavelengths of light reflected from the young alfalfa plants that are yellow-green is very attractive to leafhoppers flying over the field. To a leafhopper this indicates that the plant is succulent and rich in the nutrients it needs for proper egg development and growth and development. Older plants have harder stems and leaves and a lower protein content. Besides providing a good diet for the leafhoppers the younger plants are more tender, making it easier for females to penetrate the stem to deposit their eggs in the stem.

In summary, by watching the spring storms that move into Pennsylvania beginning in late April, the arrival of leafhoppers can be anticipated. Scouting after regrowth of the first cutting has reached 2 to 4 inches will help identify economic infestations of leafhopper before significant injury occurs. It is particularly important to check fields after a storm originating in the Gulf of Mexico has just passed through, since leafhoppers are transported northward in the spring on these storms into Pennsylvania.

Evening Grazing Is More Efficient

Research from Great Britain shows that dairy cows on pasture consume the greatest amount of pasture four to five hours before dark.

About 40 percent of the cows; daily pasture intake occurred in the period between evening milking and dark. Cows put on pasture after the morning milking grazed for less time (2 to 3 hours) and consumed less pasture than the evening grazing group. In the last five weeks of the research trial, cows on pasture after the evening milking produced 5 percent more milk than cows allowed on pasture only after the morning milking.

SPECIAL REPORT

REDUCING THE POTASSIUM CONTENT OF FORAGES THROUGH FORAGE MANAGEMENT

Dr. Marvin H. Hall
Penn State Forage Specialist

In recent years, potassium (K) content of forages has become a major concern on dairy farms because it plays a major role in cation balance of the feed ration which is a contributing factor for milk fever.

Increasing K level in the soil, because of current manure management strategies and excessive K fertilization, has resulted in relatively high K levels in many of our forages.

High K content of forages increases the difficulty in balancing the ration with respect to divalent cations such as magnesium and calcium. However, there are a few management practices that can be implemented to reduce forage K content and minimize the potential problem before it occurs.

1. Apply manure or potassium-containing fertilizers only where they are recommended through soil testing. When soil potassium exceeds recommended levels it accumulates in forage plants without a concurrent increase in forage yield. This situation results in forages with excessively high K content.

2. Allow forages to mature as much as possible before harvest. There are some obvious forage quality tradeoffs associated with this practice. However, K levels can be reduced by about 25 percent (e.g. 2.3 to 1.8 percent) if alfalfa is allowed to mature from bud to 25 percent flower before harvesting.

3. Harvest the forage as low to the ground as possible. The tops of forage plants contain higher concentrations of K than the base of plants. Harvesting close to the ground will result in lower K content forage.

4. Practices that keep more leaves in harvested forage will reduce K content because K tends to accumulate in the stem.

5. Include a grass in the forage mixture. Grasses tend to have lower K content than legumes. However, on soils with excessive K levels grasses can also contain excessive amounts of K.

For all of these management practices to be effective, a good system of forage monitoring and inventory must be in place. Segregating forages based on K content and matching this with the needs of animal groups is essential. If high forage K levels persist then substituting some low K forage, such as corn stalks, for the high K forage can help bring the total forage K content to a more manageable level.

Farmers: Watch Out For Skin Cancer

HERSHEY (Dauphin Co.) — As graziers spend more time out in the sun readying pastures and planting seed in the fields, they should pay more attention to the sun.

Some don't. As a result, said Dr. Elizabeth M. Billingsley, a dermatology surgeon at The Milton S. Hershey Medical Center College of Medicine, "a lot of our patients have significant, significant damage of their skin and a much higher risk of skin cancer."

For farmers, exposure to the sun is a given. They work outside year-round. The constant sun exposure in spring and summer build up over a lifetime — and Billingsley sees them, as they age, develop skin cancer.

The damage, first in the form of a tan, is a sign of unhealthy exposure to the sun. While Billingsley noted that farmers can't be hermits and avoid the sun, they should learn to be "smart about it," she said. "Skin cancer is very, very common in farmers."

A lot of sun damage can be visible on the backs of hands and areas of the face and neck. The skin is rough, leathery, thickened, scaly, and often red and crusted. Same with areas of the face, especially the ears and neck. Farmers ride on tractors, and those hands are "out there getting beat by the sun all day long," said the dermatologist.

On a hot, sunny day, farmers do little if anything to beat the damaging rays of the sun.

Too late, they learn a painful lesson.

Billingsley has seen farmers, the majority older than 50, with skin cancer, though she has seen skin cancer on farmers in their 40s. Many non-farmers can be exposed very early in life to sun, develop sunburns, and increase their risk dramatically. Billingsley noted some in their 20s and 30s who come in for surgery to remove cancerous skin lesions that develop as a result of sun damage.

Who is at risk? Everybody, to one extent or another, noted the skin surgeon.

But people who are fair-skinned, red-haired, blue-eyed, with that "Celtic-Irish look," and people who simply don't tan well are much more susceptible to skin cancer.

"The ability to tan is somewhat of a protective mechanism but it is not prevention," said Billingsley. "We see plenty of skin cancer in people who have been tanned all their life. But people who are fair-skinned are much more likely (to develop skin cancer) at an earlier age."

There are two common types of skin cancer:

• Basal cell carcinoma, a tumor which can appear as a small, fleshy bump or nodule on the head, neck, and hands. They are the most common skin cancers found in Caucasians. Untreated, the cancer will begin to bleed, crust over, then repeat the cycle. This type of cancer rarely spreads to other parts of the body but can extend below the skin to the bone and cause local damage.

The cure rate for both basal cell and squamous cell carcinoma is 95 percent when quickly and properly treated, according to medical literature.

A more deadly type of skin cancer is malignant melanoma, estimated to develop on the skin of 32,000 Americans annually. Every year, an estimated 6,800 of them will die from melanoma.

The good news: it's almost always curable in its early stages.

Excessive sun exposure is the culprit, and atypical moles, which may run in families, can serve as markers, identifying the person at being at higher risk. Dark skin is not a guarantee against melanoma. Warnings signs include changes in the surface of a mole; scaliness, oozing, bleeding, or the appearance of a bump or nodule; spread of pigment from the border into surrounding skin; and change in sensation, including itchiness, tenderness, or pain.

There are some early signs of the less deadly skin cancers, such as the squamous cell. One sign is the appearance of what dermatologists call "actinic keratosis," or AKs for short — rough, red, scaly patches due to exposure to sun damage. It's a precursor, noted Billingsley — it can develop into cancer if left untreated.

How does Billingsley treat the cancers? AKs are treated much like a wart. They are frozen using liquid nitrogen. Basal or squamous cells are removed by treating the skin area with a local anesthetic, such as lidocaine, and then cutting or scraping it off.

Cancers in certain locations, lesions that have been treated in the past or are large, may require a more involved surgical procedure, Billingsley noted. Mohs surgery, also performed using a local anesthetic, has a higher cure rate in these cases.

Billingsley performs about 20 surgeries a week, some of them farmers. All are done as an outpatient service.

She also provides information to transplant patients, who, because of their treatments as a result of the transplants, are at a higher risk of developing skin cancer.

"Prevention is critical," she said.

Here's a guideline farmers should use when out in the sun:

• Wear a broad-brimmed hat, that covers the face and neck. A simple baseball cap is at least something, but offers minimal protection to the face and none to the neck. The ideal type has a flap that protects the neck as well as the ears. A baseball cap offers no ear protection. And Billingsley has removed large areas of cancer from patient's ears.

• Use sunscreen daily, with a minimum protection factor of 15 that blocks Ultraviolet A and B from the skin. Farmers should keep a bottle in the tractor cab and reapply frequently. Also, use a lip balm containing sunscreen, because skin cancer can occur in the lips.

• Wear long-sleeved shirts to protect the arms. Billingsley understands that with high temperatures and humidity, this may be improbable — if so, many sunscreen products resist sweat and can last a long time, some with eight-hour protection.

Billingsley noted that many people from every walk of life are developing skin cancer. She sees people who are sunbathers and vacationers who get a lot of sun exposure.

A tan is a response to ultraviolet radiation from the sun.

"It is a sign of sun damage," she said. People should not try to purposefully tan.

"Tanning booths are also a source of dangerous radiation," said Billingsley. "The idea that tanning booths provide a safe tan is wrong."

But she continues to see a lot of farmers who don't understand the risks of sun exposure.

"I don't know of any farmer who started using sun protection and then stopped," she said. "I think a lot of them just don't think about it. It's not a high priority. But once they show up and start getting treated for it, the majority of the damage is done.

"But doing some protective measures at that point is not a waste."

For those who want a tan, there are self-tanning creams available that are practically waterproof, are safe to use, but need to have sun protectant included in them. They are made to look even more realistic than in the past.

For farmers, starting protective measures at a young age can "possibly minimize the expression of all the damage and maybe decrease some skin cancers from actually forming. So you can make a difference."

EFFECT OF DISC AND SICKLE MOWER-CONDITIONERS ON STAND PERSISTENCE AND YIELD

Dan Undersander And Darwin Frye
University of Wisconsin

The use of disc mower-conditioners has grown rapidly since their introduction and surpassed the sale of sickle mowers in 1997.

Despite these trends, there are still many producers who resist purchasing a disc mower because they feel this mower is too aggressive on alfalfa plants. These producers are concerned about stand persistence and yield reductions that a disc mower may cause.

With this concern in mind, a study was initiated in Wisconsin to evaluate the yield and persistence of alfalfa cut with a disc mower-conditioner (DMC) compared to a sickle mower-conditioner (SMC).

Plant stands were equal between fields cut with the DMC and the SMC with an average of 6.2 alfalfa plants per square foot. Similarly, yields were equal between DMC and SMC machines averaging 1.48 tons per acre.

Based on this study, there doesn't appear to be any more stand reduction or yield loss for a DMC compared to a SMC. However, research station staff found that the DMC allowed a faster cutting speed and earlier morning cutting with less plugging than with the SMC machine.

FALL-GRAZING MANAGEMENT EFFECTS GRASS PRODUCTION AND PERSISTENCE

As the costs associated with animal agriculture increase, so does the interest in grazing season into the fall or early winter helps reduce animal production expenses relative to feeding hay or silage. Tall fescue has traditionally been the grass species used for fall grazing and/or stockpiling (accumulating standing forage during the growing season for use in late fall or winter).

However, other grass species which have excellent fall growth attributes may also work well for fall grazing and/or stockpiling. Our objective was to evaluate the seasonal and whole-year production of perennial ryegrass, prairie grass, and tall fescue under different fall grazing management schemes.

In 1994, 1995 and 1996 three fall-grazing treatments consisting of: 1. Stockpiled; 2. Lax (grazing once in September and then not grazing again until spring); and (3) Intensive (continue grazing on approximately 30-d schedule through November) were imposed on established stands of "Barcel" tall fescue, "Citadel" perennial ryegrass, and "Grasslands Matua" prairie grass at the Haller Livestock and Forage Research Center near State College. Swards were grazed to a residual 2 inches stubble height by mature crossbred ewes. Forage yield, persistence, and ewe grazing days were monitored throughout the study.

Perennial ryegrass and tall fescue responded similarly within and across grazing treatments. Total season yield and persistence of perennial ryegrass were equal to those of tall fescue regardless of the fall grazing management.

During the first year after implementing the grazing treatments, prairie grass had lower survival and lower total season yield in the Stockpiled compared with the other grazing treatments. By year two of the study, prairie grass had not survived in any of the grazing treatments. Poor winter survival of Grasslands Matua prairie grass in Pennsylvania makes it an unsuitable grass in perennial pastures.

Continuing to graze grasses on an approximate 30-d interval into the fall until the grasses stopped growing produced the most annual forage and consequently the most grazing days. However, unlike stockpiling, this grazing practice (Intensive) cannot extend the grazing season beyond November in Pennsylvania. In addition, spring growth of fall grazed and stockpiled grasses is less than when grasses are not harvested after September (Lax). Consequently, a combination of Lax, intensive and Stockpiled grazing may be the most desirable under similar conditions.

Recommendations: Tall fescue and perennial ryegrass were similar in performance regardless of the fall grazing treatment. Grasslands Matua prairie grass did not survive in this and other studies in the northeast region.

Therefore, varieties with improved winter survival must be available before farmers in northern climates consider prairie grass as a viable component in perennial pastures. Using a combination of Lax, Intensive and Stockpile grazing may be most desirable. Intensive and Stockpile grazing would allow continued grazing into the fall and early winter, respectively, and Lax grazing would permit early spring grazing while the fall-grazed pastures recover.

HARD SEED IN ALFALFA: DOES IT MATTER?

Questions about hard seed in alfalfa are becoming more important with increased seed production in the northwestern United States where seed tends to have higher levels of hard seed. To answer questions about hard seed, two studies were conducted at three midwest locations in 1992 and 1993. Each year four varieties with three levels of hard seed were planted at each location.

In study one, 100 seeds were planted in a ring in the ground and germinated alfalfa seedlings were counted monthly and then removed. Most of the seed germinate within the first month after seedling with very little germination in later months, regardless of hard seed level. This tells us that, when farmers ask about hard seed filling in a thin alfalfa stand, the answer is that it will not because very few seeds germinate after the first month.

A second study looked at the effect of hard seed levels on alfalfa yield. In this study all plots were seeded at 12 lbs./a regardless of the level of hard seed. As shown in the table below, hard seed had no effect on yield in either the seeding year or the year after seeding.

PFGC OFFERS GRANTS TO SUPPORT FORAGE FIELD DAYS

The Pennsylvania Forage and Grassland Council (PFGC) board of directors recently allocated some funds to encourage people to organize on-farm field days that emphasize forages. While the fund is not larege ($500 total) it was provided to assist anyone who wants to put on a forage field-day and might need a little financial help.

If you are planning to have a forage field-day this year and are interested in some financial assistance from the PFGC, please let Marvin Hall (116 A.S.I. Building, University Park, PA 16802) know what you have planned and how much support you would like. In April the PFGC will decide the grants and notify the recipients.

In return for the financial support, the PFGC would like to be recognized as supporting your field-day and may ask for five minutes on the program to discuss what the PFGC is and does.

SPECIAL REPORT

PLANNING AHEAD WITH ANNUAL FORAGES

Marvin H. Hall
Penn State Forage Specialist

Forage shortages most often occur during the summer when dry conditions reduce productivity or in the early winter when cool temperatures restrict plant growth of perennial forage crops.

By planning ahead for periods of low production from the perennial species, annual crops can be planted which will provide forage during these periods.

In the event that the summer is not dry and perennial forages maintain high levels of production, then the summer-annual crops will not necessarily be lifesavers but can be utilized along with the perennial crops as a source of forage. However, it is important to remember that annual crops need to be a planned component of the forage system and not a reaction after the perennial crops begin to decline in production.

While no forage species could have maintained high production during last summer's dry weather, some annual forage species could have been more productive than our traditional perennial forage crops. That is, if they had been established before the dry weather.

The decision to plant an annual crop as insurance against dry weather should be an economical one. In a year such as last, the value of any forage was high and the economic benefits of annual forage crop production were obvious. However, in a wet summer, the economics of production are not necessarily negative since the crop can still be utilized as a forage for livestock consumption. The annual crop simply removes some of the risks associated with farming in the unpredictable weather of Pennsylvania.

Where Do Annual Forage Crops Fit In?

Summer annual grasses, including sorghum, sudangrass, sorghum-sudan hybrids, and millet, grow best at relatively high temperatures (80 degrees F) and maintain production under conditions of limited moisture. They should be planted from two weeks after corn until the end of June.

Seedings may be made as late as July 15 in emergency situations, but yields will be reduced because of limited moisture and cool temperatures during the fall.

Summer-annual grass harvest for silage should occur when the grasses are in the medium to hard dough stage. The best time to graze these grasses is when they are between 18 and 30 inches tall. Contact your County Extension Office to obtain Agronomy Facts 23, "Summer-Annual Grasses For Supplemental or Emergency Forage" for more detailed information about use of summer-annual grasses in your system.

Brassicas including rape, kale, turnip, and swede have different growth characteristics and can be seeded in the spring or late summer to provide a range of utilization periods. Rape and turnip can usually be grazed about 90 days after planting while kale and swede normally require about 150 days before harvesting (Table 1).

Table 1 Characteristics and seeding rate of brassica forage crops.

Crop	Plant part consumed	Seeding to harvest	Regrows after harvest	Seeding rate
Rape	herbage	90-100 d	yes	3.5 - 4 lb/acre
Kale	herbage	150-180 d	no*	3.5 - 4 lb/acre
Turnip	herbage and root	90-100 d	yes	1.5 - 2 lb/acre
Swede	herbage and root	150-180 d	no	1.5 - 2 lb/acre

* An exception is the stemless cultivar 'Premier' which will regrow after harvest.

Small Grains such as wheat, barley, rye and triticale should be planted from mid-August to early September and can be utilized for grazing from October through December and again in early spring. If the small grain is to be harvested for silage, grazing should be discontinued when the plants begin upright growth in the spring.

The key to success with annual forage crops is to plan ahead. By planning ahead and establishing a small portion of your forage acreage to annual forages, you provide insurance against inclement weather with minimal net cost even if the weather turns out to be ideal for perennial forage crop production.

Leafhoppers Lower Yield More Than Quality

In an Ohio study and preliminary data from Pennsylvania, heavy potato leafhopper infestation hurt yield but had little impact on forage quality Four leafhopper treatments were compared; no insecticide, insecticide applied every two weeks after the first harvest, spraying at the economic threshold, and spraying at 1.5 times the economic threshold.

In the seeding year, high leafhopper populations significantly reduced yield in the second and third harvests. But forage quality was similar among treatments except that the second harvest in the untreated plots was lower.

In the year after seeding, yield was still significantly lower in treatments that were not sprayed in the seeding year.

So You Want To Build A Pond?

SPRINGFIELD (Delaware Co.) — Ponds can provide many recreational benefits to homeowners, but they have their share of problems, said a water source specialist in Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences.

"Some ponds develop leaks or fill with sediment," said extension associate Bryan Swistock. "The water may be muddy, or choked with weeds and algae And you may never get the big fish you hoped would be there for the kids to catch."

To address the basics of pond management, water specialists from Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences will host a live satellite clinic, which will be downlinked in counties across the state on April 27 from 7 p.m. to 9 p.m. Local programming at each site will begin at 6:45 p.m. The clinic is free, but advance registration is required.

AMAZING GRAZING
By Dick Warner
Resource Management Advocate
New York State GLCI

Amazing Grazing, too simple
it seems
To use the grass that's free.

But costs were up and prices down,
So now the light I've seen.

Dividing land around the barn
Into paddocks large, then small
The object is to keep the cows
On grass that's six inches tall.

With several rubber water tanks
And some plastic pipe we've laid,
We've found fresh water availability
To be more important than shade.

We move the cows at intervals
No longer than a day;
If pastures get over 12 inches tall
We make then into hay.

Amazing Grazing, too simple
it seems
But I know it works for me,
And I'd rather move a little fence
Than give shots of BST.

If you'd like help with what
Here's what I'd suggest . . .

operative Extension office is hosting this clinic at the Environmental Center in Smedley Park, Springfield. The local meeting will be chaired by Steve Kosiak, a Penn State Master Gardener and dedicated environmentalist. Publications on pond management and environmental issues from Penn State will be available. To register, call the extension office at (610) 690-2655.

"How you manage your pond depends on your goals," Swistock explained. "People who want a pond for swimming, for instance, usually want a clean, sandy bottom without many weeds. But if you want a good fishery, you'll need some plants and other underwater protection for fish, such as cinder blocks or old Christmas trees."

During the clinic, experts from Penn State, the Pennsylvania Fish and Boat Commission and the Natural Resources Conservation Service will offer tips and advice on managing a pond and will answer audience questions by telephone and fax.

"The most frequent questions center on aquatic plant and weed control," said Swistock, "so we'll spend time discussing aquatic herbicides. We also get a lot of questions about fisheries, so we'll discuss the best kinds of fish to stock, species to avoid, and how to harvest fish to keep the populations balanced." Other topics will include siting and design, correcting problems, getting permits, pond maintenance, and testing water quality.

Protein . . . What's Potassium Got To Do With It?

NORCROSS, Ga — The world is hungry for protein. It is one of the main building blocks of life. We get our protein directly from plants or indirectly from animals who get it from eating plants.

Proteins are complex combinations of amino acids, which are small, simple compounds composed mainly of carbon, hydrogen and nitrogen. Nitrogen is the key to protein. The more nitrogen a plant has, the more protein it can synthesize.

Protein does not contain any potassium, but potassium is as essential to protein as is nitrogen. Simply stated, potassium is required in every major step of protein synthesis. Some of these roles include:

• Enzyme activation. Enzyme activation is one of the most important functions of potassium in plants. More than 80 plant enzymes require potassium to activate them, and many of these are directly involved in nitrogen metabolism. Plants need high concentrations of potassium for full enzyme activation.

• Energy relations. Plants need potassium to make the high-energy phosphate molecules that are produced in photosynthesis and respiration. These compounds supply the energy required for nitrogen metabolism.

• Nitrogen movement. Potassium helps move nitrate-nitrogen into and within the plant. Potassium stimulates nitrate uptake by plant roots and then accompanies it to aerial plant parts where it can be converted into protein. Potassium is also involved in the transport of other needed materials to and away from the sites of protein synthesis.

Plants well supplied with potassium take up more nitrogen and utilize it better. Research has shown that wheat with ample potassium promotes the movement of nitrogenous compounds from vegetative plant parts to the Management practices such as fall harvest reduce the amount of stubble remaining on the field. Reduced stubble can also reduce the "snow catch" in a field and decrease the amount of snow cover. This increases the chance of winter injury and decreases the chance of forage survival.

1999 PSU Herbicide Selector Available On The Web

The 1999 version of the PSU Herbicide Selector will soon be available to download from the web. This version has been updated from last year's program, so you will need to delete the 1998 Herbicide Selector from your hard drive and then completely download the new 1999a version. As new information is obtained, updates to the Selector may occur throughout the year.

The PSU Herbicide Selector program was originally developed at Ohio State University and has been modified for use in Pennsylvania. The objective of the PSU Herbicide Selector is to aid in the selection of suitable corn and soybean herbicide programs for use in Pennsylvania. The Selector provides herbicide options for and information about selected weed species as well as herbicide and application pricing information.

This program was developed for use on IBM or IBM compatible computers and will run in Windows 95 or Windows NT, but runs best in the DOS mode. To download a copy of the 1999a PSU Herbicide Selector visit the following web site and follow the instructions: http://www.agronomy.psu.edu/weeds/herb select htm grain — that means higher protein.

Protein

The ability of potassium to improve nitrogen uptake appears to occur regardless of the level of available nitrogen. One study with wheat found that high potassium combined with low nitrogen increased nitrogen uptake by 33 percent and increased percent protein from 13.3 to 15.3. When the wheat was supplied with high potassium and high nitrogen, nitrogen uptake increased 29 percent, and protein increased from 16.7 to 17.6 percent.

Grain protein is not the only quality factor positively influenced by potassium. Kernel weight, size, and plumpness are also improved. And of course, yields increase when potassium is applied to deficient soils.

All plants require plenty of potassium. But high protein crops require so much more. Forage, oilseeds, and pulse crops all have one thing in common — they yield high protein, and they need to be well supplied with potassium to produce it.

The world's population wants and needs more protein. To produce those proteins in the most efficient way, pay attention to potassium fertility. A pound of potassium makes a pound of nitrogen go further.

BALE A TON EVERY 3 MINUTES

More and more farmers are making hay the big way. More farmers are buying square balers from Hoober, Inc. With three models to choose from, the reasons to buy a CASE IH big square baler are clear:

Productivity

CASE IH big square bales are quick to handle, and that means you can be more productive. In fact, with a CASE IH big square baler you can bale up to 20 tons of hay per hour And there's no stopping to tie and eject bales. That's 1 ton every 3 minutes.

Shipping

CASE IH big square bales give you large transport payload. Since bales are stackable, you can fit more hay into a limited area. The bottom line is more bales of hay per truckload.

High Moisture Capability

CASE IH 8575 & 8585 big square balers are built to handle high moisture hay and deliver consistent bale weight and density regardless of varying moisture conditions. CASE IH balers keep moisture in for better quality hay. Higher hay quality means more profits.

Less Leaf Loss

CASE IH big square balers are center-line balers and have an extra wide pick-up for increased capacity with less leaf loss. And a charge chamber preforms bale flakes for better leaf retention to ensure higher hay quality.

Hoober's Super Service

ADVANCED MACHINERY SERVICE

Hoober, Inc. has the experienced service mechanics who will keep your big square baler running strong.
